B.C. May Give Addicts Heroin

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi told a crowd of concerned citizens Wednesday night that eventually the government may simply have to give drugs to addicts.

More than 500 people were gathered in Vic High auditorium to discuss, in an open forum, Victoria's growing drug problem.

They listened to the problems, frustrations and sad testimonials of more than 30 people.

They heard few solutions.

Levi told them the problem "rests squarely" on the provincial government and they were prepared to be "pretty adventuresome" in trying to find a solution.

"We need to try a number of different ways," he said.

"But in my opinion, not many people can get off it — if they're on hard stuff.

"In the long haul we may just have to accept we're going to have to give them the drug . . . it would be less costly and more humane."

He told the meeting a government policy position on drugs was being worked out and would come before the house during this session.

He suggested a drug dependence commission, with some kind of full time staff, may be appointed.

The floor was opened for the public to bring forth their experiences and their ideas for dealing with drug addiction and people were soon queuing up in front of the microphone.

Most who spoke were soon carried away with their own stories and could offer only vague solutions, while moderator Peter Lesoway, president of the Canadian Concerned Citizens group, kept calling for constructive ideas.

Several drug addicts and former drug users spoke and most said they couldn't explain why they had turned to drugs.

"If I had to put my finger on it I'd say it was lack of anything else to do," one young heroin addict explained, and many seemed to agree with him.

One concrete solution was offered by Dr. Jim Lang, Victoria director of the Narcotics Addiction Foundation, who said he hoped to start a house for those fighting drug addiction and eventually to acquire a farm outside the community.

"We must pressure the government to take drugs out of the criminal area and into the mental health area," Lang said.

The idea of drug addiction as a medical problem was stressed through out the evening, especially by Oak Bay MLA Dr. Scott Wallace who sat on the platform.

Wallace said his generation had looked unsympathetically on self-inflicted sicknesses such as drug addiction.

But drugs should be looked on as a mental health problem which lead to physical

Viet Guards Harassing Observers

Times News Services

The Polish and Hungarian delegations to the International Commission for Control and Supervision are threatening to move their troops out of the commission's compound at the base.

Canadian officials in limousines and scout cars flying the red maple leaf flag have been delayed for as long as four hours at the main gate in almost invariably futile attempts to escort Canadian and U.S. journalists to their compound.

Sources say the Poles are furious because their chief delegate, Bogdan Wasilewski, has been stopped several times at the gates and required to show his identity cards although his car was flying the commission flag.

The Hungarians object strongly to having to pass through the guard posts of another nation.

"I try to hang as much shoulder out of the window as possible every time I go past that guard point so they'll see the gold bars," said a Canadian colonel, "but it doesn't always work."

Indonesia is the other member of the four-nation supervisory commission.

Meanwhile, two North Vietnamese representatives of the Joint Military Commission ran into trouble today in Hue, where a dozen South Vietnamese surrounded their car, beat on it with bamboo sticks and wet one of the men with some sort of liquid thrown into the car. The asssilants backed away when an escort of South Vietnamese MPs got out of their car. The North Vietnamese were not hurt.

In Washington, meanwhile, President Nixon's plans to help reconstruct North Vietnam are in serious trouble in Congress, despite the agreement on a postwar economic program between the U.S. and its foe in almost a decade of war.

Foreign aid experts in congress said the program was a probable casualty of this session no matter how carefully the administration tailors it to meet the legislators' objections.

The amount of aid is considered to be the least of the obstacles. Early indications are that the $7.5 billion, five-year figure for both North and South Vietnam will be sharply pared before it is submitted to congress.

Most important is the decision whether the reconstruction money will be funneled directly from Washington to Hanoi and Saigon, or handled and administered by an international agency such as the Asian Development Bank or the United Nations.

In Hanoi the government radio charged today the United States was building up an undercover force in Vietnam of up to 10,000 civilians.

Although top U.S. officials are keeping its size a top secret, guesses are that the expeditionary corps of military disguised as civilians will run between 6,000 and 10,000 men," the radio said.

WHY SHOOT HEROIN?

By WILLIAM RASPBERRY
(A commentary by a Washington Post columnist.)

There is one piece of the drug-abuse puzzle that hardly anybody wants to handle. It's almost as though we forget that it's there.

That is the question: What is wrong with drug addicts?

Not after they're hooked — everybody knows then what's wrong. I mean, what is wrong with a person that makes him, with full knowledge of what heroin can do, want to shoot up anyway? The first time.

If we could answer that question, and do something about it, we could dismantle the bureau of narcotics and dangerous drugs and send its agents someplace where their services really are needed — to one of the big pharmaceutical houses, for instance.

There would be no need for strongarm agreements with Turkey, where the opium poppy flourishes, or France, where it is processed; no reason for so many customs people searching for (or maybe being bribed not to search for) smuggled narcotics; no incredibly lucrative mainstay for organized crime, and considerably less compulsion for the dope-inspired unorganized crime.

All it would take is for the poor schnook on the street to say: No, thanks.

It is extremely doubtful that any anti-drug program will work. Everybody knows that, of course. But when we are confronted with a massive problem, there is the almost irresistible temptation to try massive solutions.

We trick outselves into looking for kingpins and keystones — those few central figures who, if they were removed, would topple the entire structure.

So we threaten to halt foreign aid to Turkey; we raise the penalties for smuggling; we propose (as did New York's Gov. Rockefeller) automatic life sentences for every penny-ante pusher; we keep adding men — and money for anti-drug law enforcement.

Occasionally, there is a payoff for all this investment of pressure, time and money — for instance, the recent bust that, according to the papers, cut off a fourth of the illicit drugs that had been reaching

OTTAWA (CP) — It cost the public $269,866 for 800,000 1973 calendars sent out free by the post office, the Commons was told Wednesday.

Only the cost of production by Metropole Litho Inc. of Montreal was shown. One edition was revised after "some errors" were found. The calendars gave February three extra days.

Distribution to the general public and the business community was made through post offices.

Pilots' Walkout Tonight

British Columbia pilots will stop work at midnight tonight following a breakdown of wage negotiations with Pacific Pilotage Authority.

Thirty pilots stationed in Victoria will be affected by the work stoppage which will bring almost a complete closure of deepsea activity in B.C. ports.

All shipping companies have been notified of the pending work stoppage. About five deepsea vessels are expected in B.C. waters by Saturday and more than 40 in the next two weeks.

Stanley Clarke, chairman of the Pacific Pilotage Authority said that "negotiations now have come to an end as a result of the exorbitant demands of British Columbia Coast Pilots Ltd."

Clarke said that although claiming not to be primarily concerned with monetary demands, the company has in fact insisted on a final settlement package which would cost the authority approximately 30 per cent more for pilots' service in the first year.

$ Shockwaves Spread, 3 Currencies Devalued

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Shockwaves of the U.S. dollar devaluation spread today and three more European countries devalued their currencies. Pandemonium hit the London gold market and the price of gold soared again to a new all-time high.

Finland and Sweden devalued their currencies by five per cent. The Portuguese escudo dropped 3.5 per cent by government decree. Scores of other nations revalued their currencies upward. The dollar was weak in Asia, especially on the Tokyo money market.

On the London bullion market a flood of Asian buy orders shot up the price of gold $1.15 to a new peak of $73.62 an ounce.

The rise followed a record breaking $3 jump Wednesday.

The flood of orders showed little sign of tapering off and the new price effectively jumped gold's value against the dollar by 1 per cent since the eruption of the crisis three weeks ago.

The dollar improved slightly in Britain, however, where banks were exchanging pounds for $2.465 against $2.47 Wednesday.

In Zurich, the dollar lost ground again, changing hands at 3.355 Swiss francs for each dollar versus 3.377 Wednesday. This represented an effective 14 per cent increase in the value of the Franc against the dollar.

Denmark and Norway said their currencies would hold their value.

Spain's markets remained closed, but the Bank of Spain continued to allow tourists to change $50 at the pre-devaluation rate of 63 pesetas.

The nine members of the European Common Market said today President Nixon's decision to devalue the dollar by 10 per cent would contribute to resolving world balance of payments problems. But they said his action would not stop them from going ahead with work on a worldwide monetary overhaul.

In Brussels, at the end of a five-hour meeting to discuss post-devaluation strategy, Common Market finance ministers said splits and divisions within the huge trade block would not keep them from moving toward economic unity.

They also ignored threats of trade reprisals from the

No More Navy Whiskers

The defence department has clipped its two-year-old regulation allowing members of the forces to grow beards.

As of Feb. 8 commanding officers are no longer able to grant permission for their men to raise whiskers, a Maritime Command spokesman said today.

No explanation for the order has arrived yet from Ottawa and the status of many existing beards is uncertain.

The spokesman said there had been speculation that men with beards may be allowed to keep them, provided they never shave again.

Meanwhile, the sea element of the forces appears to be in line for another crushing blow to tradition — the removal of naval officers' rank title, which has been under consideration for some time.

There is nothing official yet, the command spokesman said, but he expected it to happen this year.

The use of ranks such as lieutenant-commander, commander and commodore had been permitted for sea duty even though all other Canadian officers had been assigned military titles, including air force officers.

Ottawa also reports all reserve forces would be issued green berets as standard issue by the end of 1973, along with the standard green uniform. Highland units will retain the kilt.

Heath To Fight

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Edward Heath headed into a showdown with Britain's labor unions today over his pledge to preserve tight anti-inflation curbs on pay and prices.

British political commentators reported growing speculation he is ready to carry the fight to the nation itself in an early parliamentary general election on the issue: "Who runs Britain — the labor unions or the government?"

Heath drew the battle lines in a two-hour confrontation at his No. 10 Downing St. office Wednesday with the general council of the Trades Union Congress which represents 10 million British workers.

He said afterwards that he told the union leaders his government is determined to win the war against inflation. He ruled out any exceptions to the tough pay curbs it has laid down.

"We are determined to win the war against inflation. That is the government's policy. I believe it's the national policy and I'm absolutely con-

SHANGHAI BIGGEST CITY

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Shanghai has moved ahead of Tokyo and New York to become the world's biggest city with a population of 10.8 million, the U.N. demographic yearbook reports.

The 816-page report also included for the first time data on abortion.

The survey also disclosed such facts as that in seven countries, men have a longer life expectancy than women, that the lifespan in some nations is only 25 and that the New York borough of Manhattan has a population density of nearly 68,000 persons per square mile.

For the first time, the yearbook contains data from China, which was admitted to the United Nations in October, 1971.

B.C. Bans the Strap in Schools

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The day of the strap is over in British Columbia's schools, Education Minister Eileen Dailly told the legislature Wednesday.

By order-in-council on Friday, the provincial government will ban all corporal punishment in the province's public schools and amend the Public Schools Act regulations to stipulate that the discipline enforced "shall be similar to that of a kind, firm and judicious parent," she said.

Dailly said as minister of education she cannot in all conscience preside over a school system which condones and permits the use of corporal punishment.

"Surely, if we want to reduce acts of violence in our community and in the world we must eliminate acts of violence in our schools," she said. "If we want to develop future generations into more human people we must practise humanity ourselves."

Speaking in the budget debate, the education minister made several other major policy announcements, including:

—Institution in 1974 of a set spring vacation at the end of March, so that the holiday will not be inflexibly tied to Easter.

—An assurance that federal funds provided for French language instruction will be reserved exclusively for that purpose and not — as she said they had been under the Social Credit government — absorbed into general revenue.

—A system to enable adults who have not graduated from secondary school to qualify for "senior secondary school equivaleney diplomas," so that they are not barred from job promotions or new employment or training opportunities.

—Expansion of family living and sex education programs throughout the public schools system.

—Creation of the post of Director of Indian Education in the department's special services division. A native Indian will be appointed to this permanent position in April, charged with studying ways of improving educational opportunities for Indian children and making the curriculum "more relevant" to their needs.

Dailly also announced that Grade 12 government examinations will be abolished in 1974 and from that time graduation will be determind on the school's own assessment of students.

Scholarship examinations, she said, would still be available for students wishing to write them and with effect from the 1973-74 education year the exams would be held twice a year, in January and June, rather than in June only.

She repeated earlier statements that the government will introduce legislation making it mandatory for all school boards to provide kindergartens — which are not now available in 16 school districts in the province.

But attendance at the kindergarten level will not be compulsory, Dailly added.

On another policy matter announced earlier, Dailly said the two special commissions she is setting up to look into

Devaluation Won't Help

By EDWIN DALE
New York Times Analysis

WASHINGTON — The predictable outcome of the current international monetary crisis, as with the previous one, was further change in currency exchange rates, with an additional depreciation by one means or another of the international exchange value of the dollar.

The question being increasingly asked by economists, bankers, government officials and others is whether exchange rate changes really do much good in solving the underlying problem, which is the huge U.S. deficit in both trade and the over-all balance of international payments.

The conventional wisdom — and it is not yet proven wrong — has it that a devaluation of the dollar raises the price of imports and either reduces the price of exports or makes them more profitable. Thus the trade balance is supposed to improve for the devaluating country and deteriorate for the upvaluing country.

The fact that this did not happen in 1972 for three key countries — United States, Japan and West Germany — is probably the most important single reason for the present crisis and the breakdown of the 1971 Smithsonian agreement on currency exchange rates. No excuses about "time lags" could change the figures: The U.S. trade deficit was much worse, and Japan's and Germany's were both better, the exact opposite of what was supposed to happen.

The new and still groping thinking about exchange rates is beginning to find some explanation for this phenomenon, apart from the conceded fact that lags are an element in the story.

A very large portion of each nation's imports is not at all "price elastic" — sensitive to higher or lower prices. If the U.S. needs oil, it will import oil almost regardless of the price. The same goes for most of other raw materials.

Other items — elaborate machinery, jet airplanes, some consumer goods — are imported because they are not available at home or because the foreign item has clearly superior quality, regardless of price.

Exporting of manufactured goods has become such a large portion of the total business of individual companies in countries such as West Germany and Japan (as distinct from the United States) that they will drastically shave profit margins in order to keep their plants going and their workers employed.

They offset the upward revaluation of their currencies and keep export prices unchanged in the U.S. and other foreign markets. Clearly this has limits, but the limits seem to be much greater than had been thought, as revealed by the remarkable steadiness of Japanese export prices, in dollar terms, despite the 16.9 per cent revaluation of the yen in late 1971 under the Smithsonian agreement.

In the case of non-trade items — including international corporate investment and tourism — a combination of affluence and various "structural" changes, such as competitive charter flights and package tours, have made currency exchange rates an almost minor factor in decisions. American tourism in Europe kept on growing last year, for example, even though everything cost more — often much more.

This school of economists here and abroad that has begun to have doubts about exchange rate changes as the means of "adjusting" each nation's balance of payments toward equilibrium is not yet in the ascendant. But its very existence is something new.

A nation could adjust by putting on all sorts of controls — on imports, on tourism, on investment. But the whole purpose of the post-war monetary and trading systems has been to avoid just that and the relatively liberal systems that emerge have unquestionably added to world propserity and individual well-being.

The worst effects of imbalance could be avoided, in the purely monetary sense, by floating exchange rates. Governments would not then, as West Germany has been doing in the last two weeks, be forced to inflate their domestic money supply in order to hold the exchange rate fixed by international agreement. By the majority of governments, businessmen and bankers still seem to feel that the conduct of international business would be hampered by the permanently floating rates, though this view may be eroding.

Even if floating rates were accepted, there could be serious "injustice," at least in the short run. How high would the yen have to float before U.S.-Japanese trade came into balance, given the new and price-inelastic nature of trade? It could easily be to such a height as to bankrupt many Japanese exporting companies, who have done nothing to deserve such a fate.

The answers to this dilemma have yet to be forthcoming. The search, in fact, is probably only beginning. There is no historical precedent for a world with the present degree of both industrialization and international exchange.

United States and urged market officials to speed up work on world monetary reform even as they lauded the dollar devaluation as a contribution to a better balance in international payments.

Officials said the meeting was chiefly a cosmetic operation to smooth over hard feelings left over from the money crisis.

Italy endangered the market's first teps toward monetary unity by floating its lira. Officials said today the Italians promised to return to fixed prices for its currency when circumstances allow, but did not give a firm date for doing so.

A communique reaffirmed the market's objective of economic and monetary union. It called on market committees to deliver reports on pooling the nine nations' reserves ahead of schedule.

The smaller nations, specially Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands, were reported angered during the pre-devaluation crisis by a private Paris meeting between finance ministers of Britain, France and West Germany.

Market sources said the British and Germans tried to make amends, but French Finance Minister Valery Giscard D'Estaing merely noted that there is no Common Market law about such meetings.

SPRING SCHOOL VACATION FIXED

post-secondary and public school education will have one chairman whose name will be announced in two weeks.

The two commissions would have diverse roles, she said, but as education is "a flowing, continuing process" one person is needed to give overall direction to their efforts.

She said she wants the groups to be "living commissions," going out into the community to talk to students, parents, teachers and taxpayers to find out what they feel about education, and what new directions are needed in education.

The commissions would report to her weekly, Dailly said, and beside formulating long-range and middle-range policies they would be able to recommend "immediate" action wherever that was considered necessary.

VACATION SYSTEM

In mentioning the changed spring vacation system to start in 1974, the minister said she was sure parents, teachers and children would welcome the move because the term is a long one when Easter falls late in the year.

An education department spokesman said later the vacation would always start on the last Monday in March and run through to the following Friday with Good Friday coming as an extra holiday whenever that happens to fall.

Dailly told the house that federal funds have been available for some time to assist teaching of French in B.C.'s public schools, but under the former Socred government those apparently "disappeared" into general revenue.

"I think this was a shameful thing to do," she said, adding that the money will now be available to school boards applying for support grants to provide learning aids in French instruction.

GRANTS FOR TAPES

"We will approve grants for tapes, television shows, student trips, in-service training, immersion projects or almost anything that will help students learn French," she said.

Outside the house, the minister told reportrs there is $700,000 immediately available for such purposes.

"As soon as I saw that money was there I grabbed it," she said.

In another swipe at the former Socred government, Dailly said it had given no encouragement and shown no leadership in getting sex education programs established.

Several school boards are now coming foward with "excellent" programs, developed through co-operation with teachers and parents, "which they were afraid to use under the past administration."

Dailly said the public school commission and the department's curriculum division will be examining these programs with the aim of expanding them throughout the school system.

Announcing she has approved in principle a system which would allow adult non-graduates to qualify for secondary school equivalency diplomas, Dailly said they would do so by taking a batch of five standardized tests.

Later, she told reporters that centres would have to be established throughout the province where these tests could be conducted.

On education as it concerns native Indians, Dailly told the legislature only 40 Indians are enrolled in B.C. universities out of a total population of 100,000 status and non-status Indians.

"Surely these figures alone point out to us that somewhere education for the native Indian child has sadly failed," she added.

vinced the great majority of the people of Britain want to see this policy succeed," Heath said.

The gas workers' strike hit three million English households today as temperatures dropped below freezing in most of the country. It was eight degrees in Yorkshire, the coldest spot below the Scottish border.

The walkout crippled the auto and other industries in the Midlands, and the state gas board warned that supply cuts soon would spread to Wales.

Fluctuations in pressure brought the risk of explosions from water heaters and stoves that use pilot lights. Officials advised customers to switch off their mains before going to bed or going out.

About 6,700 of the 40,000 gas industry workers went on strike and another 25,500 pressed a go-slow campaign.

The gas workers demanded pay raises of $8.75 a week. The government has set a $6.25 ceiling under its current anti-inflation curbs.

Principals Favor End of the Strap

The end of the strap won't make much difference to school children in Victoria since local principals say they've used corporal punishment "only rarely" in the last couple of years.

In a survey this morning, elementary school principals said they might not agree with Education Minister Eileen Dailly's blanket elimination of corporal punishment but added it wouldn't make much difference to discipline in their schools.

"I've only used the strap once this year, at a parent's request," said Monterey principal Irvine Dawson.

Contacting parents over misbehavior is usually a worse punishment, he said, and the strap is never used as a threat.

"I believe there may be a few occasions when the strap is effective," commented Claude Campbell, principal of Victoria West Elementary, "but I'm not upset that it's going.

"I think it will make us more resourceful in dealing with problems."

"Many of us have changed our thinking about this over the last 10 years," said Campus View principal R. G. McKee.

J. J. Lowther, chairman of the local principals and vice-principals association, said he had never used the strap at the high school level since he felt "it lacked dignity" for older students.

"All teachers may not be happy with the move," said Greater Victoria Teachers' Association president Bob Mitchell.

"But it has to come," he said, "it's just a matter of providing some alternative means of controlling a class."

Strapping "is not the best way but it's not the worst," Mitchell added, saying that use of sarcasm in the classroom is often a more harmful punishment.

School board chairmen were generally split on the issue.

Greater Victoria chairman Peter Bunn said he felt the move was going against public opinion.

Rubymay Parrott, Saanich board chairman, said she felt it was "an extremely good move."

"I don't believe a teacher should have to resort to violence to get across discipline."

Mrs. Catherine Schoen, president of the B.C. Parent-Teacher Federation, who were in Victoria Wednesday for PTA Day and to hear Dailly's speech, said she was pleased with the move.

She added that many of the federation's views were reflected in the education minister's speech.

. . . What Makes Him Shoot Up?

the U.S. My colleague Bill Good commented upon reading that report:

"Previous raids had cut off a half, a third, a sixth and a quarter of the narcotics, according to news stories. Just as soon as I can work out the least common denominator, I'll let you know how much more than 100 per cent of the drug traffic we've eliminated."

Gold's point is well taken, as anyone can tell you who has heard endlessly of the major busts and the resultant "panics" — and seen only the most temporary diminution in drug abuse.

We keep looking for something to happen at a sufficiently high and central level that the rest of us won't have to do anything. (In just the same way, we expect the superintendent to improve education in local classrooms.)

We talk about eliminating the really significant traffickers and taking the profit out of drug dealing, when the truth is, there's only one significant figure in the scene and only one person who can take the profit out of the traffic—the idiot who buys the stuff.

I know it's not nice to call him an idiot, and I do understand that frustration, alienation and pain of various sorts can make you do foolish things. But somehow it has never sounded very convincing to me—even when I've said it—that "conditions" make people turn to dope.

Well, what is it?

Drs. Vincent Dole and Marie Nyswander have suggested that there may be some basic flaw in some people's body chemistry that heroin corrects. It isn't clear how these flawed souls are supposed to find out that dope cures what ails them, or what they would do if dope simply weren't available.

But physiological or not, there must be some flaw—and not just in society but in the individual drug abusers. And yet, the clear trend is to treat the individual abuser as though he is 100 per cent victim. It just won't wash.

I am fully aware of peculiarly degrading effects of black urban poverty. But I'm also aware that nobody chases anybody else down and jabs a needle into his arm. You've got to search for the stuff, and it isn't always easy to find.

It would be awfully interesting to know just what it is that makes some of us go looking.

health problems, in much the same way as nervous breakdowns.

One young man suggested there might be an analogy between fighting drug problems and heart disease—both could benefit from exercise and increased physical activity.

He said an easy and inexpensive pilot project could be set up to involve drug addicts in group activities in the outdoors, or doing arts and crafts or simply exercising.

Many people said the answer lay in religion and one woman told of ending a 20-year drug addiction after finding Jesus.

Carol Haley, vice-president of the citizens group, said emergency aid centres are needed urgently to deal with the medical side of drug problems.

She told of a mother who contacted her in desperate need of help for her 11-year-old daughter who'd been shooting heroin between her toes for six months.

She said Dr. Lang's drug clinic needed much larger facilities and individual help had to be found for people undergoing withdrawal.

The last drug user to speak said he had tried most kinds of drugs, he had a wife addicted to heroin and a brother pushing 'H' in Calgary.

"So the problem is pretty big—I don't know how you're going to solve it," he said.

"We're listening — that's why I'm here."

The minister said the meeting was the most significant he had seen on the drug problem.

PROSECUTOR SMOKES POT!

SEATTLE (AP) — Saying she's fed up with "hypocrisy," a King County superior court judge has come out in favor of the legalization of marijuana.

"I sit on the bench during drug cases, and sometimes I know that both the prosecutor and defence attorney trying the case smoke dope," Judge Janice Niemi said Wednesday.

"I feel marijuana should be legalized due to the hypocrisy of the fact that most young professionals use the drug," Niemi added. "I also feel the drug should be removed from the criminal element."

Her remarks startled more than 120 Seattle high school students—not to mention representatives of the county prosecutor's office and the city police department—attending a program on law enforcement at a neighborhood youth centre.

Pound Spends Nine Hours As Witness

Access to British hospital beds is not completely blocked off to general practitioners, B.C. Supreme Court was told Wednesday.

Louis Lindholm, representing Victoria Times columnist Jack Scott and Victoria Press Ltd. in a libel action launched by Dr. Brian Pound, referred to the doctor's comment in an interview with Times reporter Don Vipond that in the United Kingdom the GP has no hospital privileges.

Three times Lindholm said to Pound: "To your knowledge, that was not true."

Pound said he wasn't discussing maternal care with Vipond, that it was his belief that a GP, without extra qualifications, had no access to these beds.

"I put it to you, that having a diploma is not essential to access to a GP unit," Lindholm said.

"I understood, it was my belief, this was so—having a diploma," Pound replied.

Did you inquire of the Royal College of Practitioners?

No.

They could have given you an answer?

Yes.

Pound is claiming libel and unspecified damages for a Scott column printed Aug. 13, 1971. It followed by three days a Times interview by reporter Vipond with Pound in which the doctor expressed views on medicine in the United Kingdom and in British Columbia.

He is also suing Baker, Lovick BBDO Limited, company vice-president R. C. Kenmuir and Western Direct Mail Services Limited for subsequent reprinting and distribution of the column.

Pound claims the column was falsely and maliciously written and published and that it held him up to contempt and ridicule in his practice as a physician and surgeon in Victoria.

Unspecified Damages Claimed

The claims are denied by the defendants in the case being heard before Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton.

Pound stepped out of the witness box at 3:25 p.m. Wednesday after giving testimony for almost nine hours, from late Monday.

Lindholm, pursuing his cross-examination, said that in England in 1966 to 1971 many GPs had access to hospital facilities for the delivery of maternity cases.

Pound said that with normal deliveries he believed there were a small number of hospitals available to a GP but complicated cases had to be referred.

You didn't tell Vipond the GP had access to hospital beds for maternity cases if the deliveries were normal, asked Lindholm.

"No, I didn't."

There were more than 3,000 hospital beds available in this way in 1966, Lindholm asked.

In non-maternity matters, in 1966 to 1971, 4,000 beds were available to GPs?

Pound said from his own experience, only cottage hospitals were available, and in his interview with Vipond he was implying acute general hospitals. He described cottage hospitals as similar to nursing homes.

Denies Knowing About GP Units

Pound replied that a GP could do this but in his experience communication between GP and consultant, and vice-versa, was "very poor" and patients often went with a "see and treat" note.

"I do not agree with that."

Lindholm quoted numerous statistics showing improvements in mortality rates for illnesses in Britain including the infant mortality rate being cut in half in the first 20 years of the National Health Service.

Pound said he saw no reason to disagree with this.

If the infant mortality rate was halved, that was a "magnificent advance?"

"Yes."

This and the maternal death rate are among the lowest in the world. Do you accept that?

"Not in general."

Lindholm asked Pound if he was aware of the marked increase in interest in health centres.

Pound agreed there was interest.

In December, 1968, there were 93 health centres in operation in England and Wales. Do you accept that?

Was the figure of 93 not "astonishing?"

"I put it to you, that at Birmingham General Hospital, there is an entire unit for the patients of GPs," Lindholm said.

Pound said he had no knowledge of that.

"Or in Wales?"

"No."

"You have never heard of GP units available in hospitals?"

"No."

Lindholm said that many GPs work as clinical assistants under specialists in general hospitals.

"I believe that about one-fifth of GPs do," Pound replied.

This was to enable them to improve their knowledge?

"I believe that's the aim."

"You didn't tell Vipond about it."

"No I didn't. The clinical assistant post was not available to all GPs."

Pound added that he didn't know clinical assistant posts existed until just prior to emigrating to Canada in 1966.

Lindholm said that GPs could refer patients to a consultant in the out-patient department of British hospitals, that the consultant would be assisted by the primary diagnosis of the GP and that the consultant would not undertake work without referring to the GP.

"No, that wouldn't surprise me."

Pound's lawyer, Cecil Merritt, concluded the day's sitting by reading a number of extracts of questions and answers given in examination for discovery by Scott, Times publisher Stuart Underhill, Kenmuir and Richard Smith, president of Western Direct Mail Services. Lawyers for the defendants challenged the evidence in places.

Continuing in the examination evidence today, Kenmuir agreed he was an active member of the Social Credit party and the reprint was to be distributed in Oak Bay constituency because MLA Dr. G. Scott Wallace "who crossed the floor" was out-spoken in his views on medicine, "so we wanted to bring it to his constituents' attention."

Kenmuir couldn't say whether he had read the Pound interview when he instructed Weston Direct Mail to reprint and circulate Scott's column.

He said he was aware of it from discussing it with people in Victoria, "I think first with Worley."

Kenmuir replied "no, no," to a question: Did Worley give you a copy of Vipond's interview with Pound.

Kenmuir said he was "very interested" in people knowing Scott's views.

(Ron Worley was deputy minister of travel and industry in the Social Credit government).

Federal University Financing Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Henry Hicks (L—Nova Scotia) called Wednesday for a uniform policy of federal financial aid to universities in all parts of Canada, and direct payment from Ottawa to the universities, bypassing the provinces.

He said such a policy would foster a provincial interchange of students and promote national unity. If Ontario students were to study in Quebec, they might find it easier to appreciate the problems of French Canada.

He cited three main inequities in the present system, based on the 1966 Pearson formula for financing post-secondary education:

—It gives most support to the richest provinces, which can spend more on universities, resulting in increased regional disparities.

—It has made Canadian universities provincial to the extent that out-of-province students often are forced to pay higher fees.

City to Aid Victoria Days

Victoria city council's finance committee today recommended a $3,000 grant to the Victoria Days Society to offset costs of renting Memorial Arena and Royal Athletic Park.

Last year the seven-day festival got a grant of $125.

Ald. Alf Hood said that while the society was "not shooting for the Calgary Stampede," they were aiming to create a full week each year when Victoria "opens the door.

"This is their third year. They've been working tremendously hard to build it up and make it a full week of celebrations—something like Edmonton's Klondike Days. I am all in favor," he said.

Ald. Bill Tindall said the society should approach other municipalities as well.

The committee also agreed to recommend that city council grant the second of its two annual liquor licences to the Victoria Days. The other licence has gone to the Highland Games.

Herring Strike Static

No progress has been made so far in the four-day old strike by union herring fishermen who use gill nets in their trade.

Vancouver spokesman for the United Fisherman and Allied Workers Union, Jaek Nichol, said he didn't know how many of the gill netters were off work but added that many of them are from Victoria.

The fishermen went on strike Monday, the opening day of their season, for two reasons, he said.

Firstly, they are striking against fish packing companies for a higher price for their catch and secondly they are fighting with the federal department of fisheries in hopes of gaining a guarantee they can catch a set percentage of the yearly herring quota.

Nichols said the gill netters are competing with seine fishermen for the 50,000-ton yearly quota but use more time-consuming methods.

The seine fishermen, who begin their season March 1, are able to catch far more fish more quickly.

Nichols explained that the seine fishermen are sympathetic to the gill netters and have said they will also go on strike if the issue is not settled by the opening of their season.

Victoria fish packers Oakland Industries say they have received no herring yet and they don't know what's going to happen in the industry.

B.C. Fish Packers refused to comment on the effects of the strike but said they "don't dabble very much in herring anyway."

Saanich Drops Plan for Arena

Saanich has dropped plans for a second ice arena.

The unexpected move results from a closed-door meeting of public works committee Tuesday at which the prospect of getting federal aid for capital projects was discussed.

Ald. Fred Severson, chairman of indoor recreation committee and a proponent of the second ice surface at the earliest opportunity, spoke in support of adding the arena proposal to unspecified public works projects. He is not a member of the committee and did not remain to hear subsequent discussion.

Only Ald. Leslie Passmore, chairman of finance committee, supported Severson's proposal of giving the arena priority to take advantage of senior government assistance that may not be available in future.

Other members present were Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman Ald. William Campbell, Ald. Frank Waring and Ald. William Noel. The remaining member, Ald. Edith Gunning, is on vacation.

Severson said he regretted that time had not permitted the assembly of full cost figures for a new rink, although senior administrative staff had been working on them. He said Feb. 23 was the deadline for applications for federal funds under a capital winter projects scheme.

"That's disappointing," Severson said. "I agree there are important priorities, but in 1974 there may not be federal aid."

He estimated that combined federal and provincial government grants would pay for two-thirds of a new arena.

"If council wants to wait to 1974, that's a long wait. If we only get provincial assistance, that's throwing money down the drain," the alderman said.

Passmore, who said he would not discuss the other capital works until they reach council level, said he had recommended the rink proposal be expedited and explained the attitude of the other aldermen:

"They just felt at this time it was not one of the things that should be pushed."

It had been pointed out that proposed Oak Bay and Central Saanich rink projects may take some of the pressure off Saanich, whose only arena cannot meet demand for ice time.

"I don't think there's any who would be vigorously opposed to it as a project," Passmore said. "They just don't think it should have priority."

Last fall council voted 5-4 to put a rink referendum before ratepayers at the earliest opportunity, and Severson said he still suppoorts this.

Treaties Close Cuban Hijack Refuge

Times News Services

Canada and the United States signed separate agreements with Cuba today to crack down on both air and sea hijackings.

The Canadian agreement, signed in Ottawa by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp and Vice-Foreign Minister Rene Anillo of Cuba, requires each country to present suspected hijackers for prosecution in its own courts or send them back to the country where the crime was committed.

Negotiations on the treaty began in 1971.

The U.S. treaty, signed by State Secretary William Rogers in Washington, is similar in intent to the Canadian treaty.

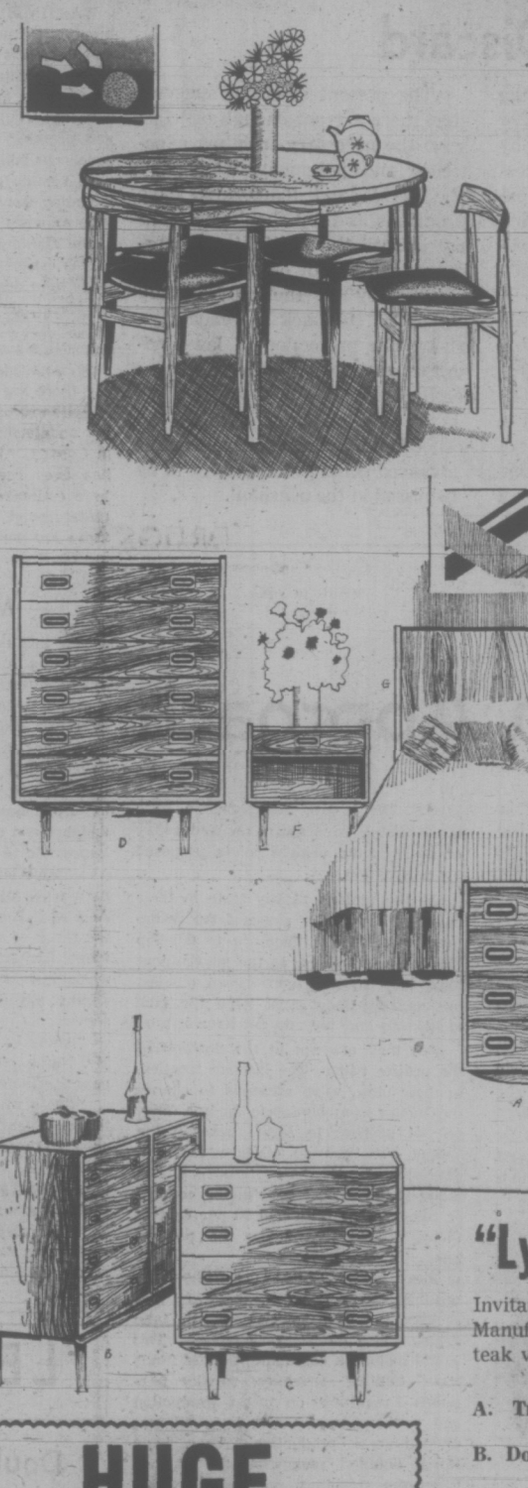

The U.S., however, retains its right to accept what it considers political refugees under the agreement, but this prosision will not apply if the refugee attempts to extort money or threatens physical injury during his flight.

Neither agreement is retroactive.

Weighting the Cable

There was a chill edge to the breeze stirred by Mr. Harold Steves, the NDP member for Richmond, when he urged in the Legislature yesterday that the provincial government take over ownership of all cable television systems in British Columbia.

Mr. Steves pointed out that it is technically feasible to carry 90 channels on one cable, and this would permit many small communities to produce local transmissions for the rest of the province, and still leave room for educational programs and other transmissions by the government.

So far so good, granted that the government programs were not politically oriented, except for shared time for all candidates during election campaigns, or periodic broadcasts by all party spokesmen.

But Mr. Steves got into deeper water with his assertion that government control of television cable systems could be achieved by taking over B.C. Tel, whose poles the cable companies use. This all presupposes, of course, that the federal government would yield its right to control broadcast transmissions in this field.

Mr. Steves then moved on to the next stage, and here the chill was strongly felt. In the words of one news report: "It (the provincial government) could apply pressure to the cable companies, which lease space on B.C. Tel poles, to provide channels for educational and public television, he said."

If the provincial government could exert that much pressure on cable companies — if it did not own them outright — could it not exert the same sort of pressure to influence the content of educational and other "public" programs? Would a cable company, whose life was dependent on the goodwill of the provincial government, feel free to carry programs critical of its patron, or use any material that was not likely to please the government?

It may be argued that the federal government has the same control of radio and television stations across Canada, and that dangerous censorship has not been detected in that area. But the federal government operates under a powerful spotlight, with the national parliament quick to follow up any accusations that are made by the public, and this public concern might not be so easily and effectively expressed on the provincial level.

When it is remembered that the future of cable broadcasts is open-ended — that most of the information of every description received by citizens in the future may be delivered by cable to every home to be heard, seen, taped or printed — then the possibilities available to a government that controlled this medium would be vast indeed.

It could usher in the era of 1984, and Mr. Steves seems to have put one small foot in the door with his proposal. No such idea should ever be advanced without a full blueprint of safeguards.

Correction, Not Discard

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand's reminder to disturbed police chiefs that Canada's parole and prison leave programs are being overhauled adds little to what had already been made public. The minister was answering a familiar complaint — that too many criminals are being released from prison too often, or too soon, under temporary leave and parole arrangements.

Presumably the solicitor-general's department and the government are responding to a public outcry to which the critical police chiefs have added volume. But the Canadian authorities may very properly be assessing means by which the overhaul will not necessarily discard the excellent concepts included in a policy which has suffered from ineffective application rather than flaws in principle.

It would be highly unfortunate if public dissatisfaction, mounting as released inmates use their free time to repeat their previous crimes, should cause a reversion to the purely punitive elements of penal operations and discard promising rehabilitative efforts.

The present situation suggests that there are not enough officials with the necessary training, experience and judgment to manage the parole and temporary leave programs as they should be managed. Until the rehabilitation programs can be put on a basis more satisfactory to the public, they should be cut back to reduce the risks. The protection of law-abiding society must be the first concern.

It would be unfortunate, on the other hand, if the whole concept of advanced penal practice were to be dismissed in the overhaul.

PAUL WHITELAW

Amnesty for a Whole Army?

WASHINGTON — Imagine for a moment a virtual army of draft evaders and deserters more than double the size of the Canadian armed forces, including army, navy, and air branches.

Such speculation points up the scope and pressing importance of an issue of American politics that may seem otherwise remote and academic to outsiders including Canadians — how to deal with "the amnesty" question in the aftermath of the Vietnam ceasefire agreement.

It is estimated that 200,000 Americans, more than double the 83,048-man Canadian forces, dodged the draft or deserted during the 12-year war, the longest in America's history.

Of those men, officials in Washington say there are between 60,000 and 100,000 in exile in North America — with a large but undetermined per cent of that group in Canada. Although no official estimate has ever been released, peace groups here estimate that some 80,000 men are underground in the United States. And there are perhaps more in jail or awaiting court action.

Major Issue

Now that the Vietnam War — at least as far as Americans are concerned — has been settled, amnesty is emerging as a major issue among the broad coalition of peace groups that opposed U.S. involvement in the fighting. It could also develop into a major political issue as the scars of Vietnam conflict are healed by time and sheer number of draft dodgers and deserters makes their plight impossible to overlook.

However, amnesty for the young man who refused to fight in Southeast Asia — if it ever comes about — will be the result of a lengthy, uphill fight. President Richard Nixon made this clear when he said he had no intention of pardoning anyone who balked at military service.

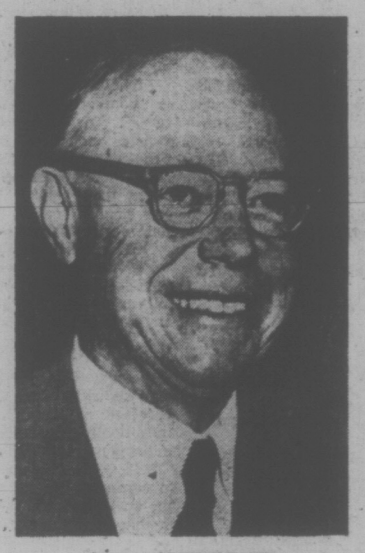

"Amnesty means forgiveness," said Mr. Nixon. "We cannot provide forgiveness for them."

"Those who served paid their price," the president said at his news conference. "Those who deserted must pay their price. And the price is not a junket in the Peace Corps or something like that as some have suggested.

"The price is a criminal penalty of disobeying the laws of the United States. If they want to return to the United States, they must pay the penalty. If they don't want to return, they are certainly welcome to stay in any country that welcomes them."

The president's remarks lifted the focus of the battle over amnesty to Capital Hill. However, Mr. Nixon's opposition is likely to put something of a damper on the effort to push an amnesty bill through Congress, and veterans' groups are expected to lobby against the idea.

Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio, an early backer of amnesty, conditional on alternate civilian national service, plans to reintroduce his 1971 bill, but with some changes. His press secretary, Doris Huddleston, told this reporter that all mention of the word "amnesty" will disappear, it causes tempers to flare. Instead the legislation will include some term which means the same thing.

SEN. ROBERT TAFT
... conditional amnesty

Neither will Sen. Taft's bill cover deserters, only draft dodgers. It should be introduced into the Senate within a month of the first return of prisoners of war.

In the House, Congressman Edward Kouch of Manhattan, has also proposed an amnesty bill. It would offer a grace period during which draft evaders could return to the United States — if they consented to a two-year national service hitch — and a presidential review board set up to study the case of the deserters.

Almost predictably, Congresswoman Della Abzug, the radical New York feminist, introduced her own universal amnesty bill. However, the proposed legislation will have tough going in both houses of Congress. Many senators and congressmen undoubtedly agree with Sen. James Eastland of Mississippi, who last week let it be known that the president's view on amnesty matched his own.

In the meantime, the debate on pardoning the men who refused to fight in Vietnam will likely continue in the United States.

Hearings on amnesty legislation are planned in both the house and the senate and a loose coalition of churchmen, liberal lawyers, the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Students Association has planned a conference this spring in Washington.

Discrimination Feared

Henry Schwarzschild, head of an American Civil Liberties Union program on amnesty says he is afraid of "massive discribination against deserters."

"We believe discrimination between these two groups (evaders and deserters) is unjustified since the only difference is whether their rejection of the military came before or after induction."

The fact that deserters are left out of the proposed Taft bill, for instance, apparently stems from a feeling that most Americans regard desertion as cowardice.

There has never been a blanket amnesty in America after a war. However, there were partial pardons after the War of 1812, after the Civil War and, to a very limited extent, the Second World War.

But never before in American history has there been a war of such length with a foreign power which so divided the country.

With a virtual army of American draft dodgers and deserters, the amnesty question is unlikely to be easily resolved or forgotten.

MAURICE WESTERN

A Promising Indian Approach

OTTAWA — Wherever the Trudeau Government looks in this difficult session, it sees Indian troubles.

On Wednesday there was a struggle on two fronts. In the House of Commons Jean Chretien fended off Opposition attacks based on the proposition that the Government has abdicated its constitutional responsibilities by adopting the role of observer at the James Bay hearings. Outside the Chamber the Prime Minister, assisted by Mr. Chretien, sought to conciliate the Yukon Native Brotherhood and appeared, in the process, to move a long way towards acceptance of their policy approach.

The Yukon Indians, avoiding the courts, are seeking a direct political settlement. Like the Nishgas, they have no treaty. Although Treaty No. 11 extends theoretically to a corner of the Territory, it has now been established by Mr. Chretien's department that earlier governments, with characteristic negligence, failed to secure the adhesion of bands in that area.

Progressive Alienation

In contrast to the Nishgas, who still largely possess their tribal territory, the Yukon Indians have watched the progressive alienation of their lands. This process has greatly accelerated as the petroleum and mineral companies have rushed to take up claims. The pace of recent development has created a sense of urgency among the people while the American settlements in neighboring Alaska have at the same time greatly influenced their thinking on goals to be sought.

The presentation to the Government is a moving appeal, eloquent in its very simplicity.

It is not a legal argument; it does not even mention "aboriginal rights", an expression still in ministerial disfavor. But this plainly is its basis. The people have been disinherited; in place of economic independence, they now have welfare hand-outs. They have been constantly assured that development is to their advantage but, in their experience, once initial construction is over, the jobs are for whites only.

The Yukon Indians are emphatic that: "We want to take part in the development of the Yukon and Canada, not stop it." But they seek a settlement in finality which will enable them to participate as partners, using the resulting resources to plan their own future. To that end, they urge the Government now to establish a negotiating committee to work out the details of a settlement with them.

Mr. Trudeau, although speaking in general terms as he was bound to do, was very responsive. He welcomed the emphasis on tomorrow and praised the approach which he termed "very constructive" and "very welcome to the Government."

He was impressed by the emphasis on solutions suggested by the Indians themselves and the view that self-develpment will be assisted if the Indians control their own lands and bank accounts, instead of being subject to an Indian department.

He promised an "extremely serious" examination of the brief, not limited by preconceived ideas or the policy paper of 1969. He said that problems, which have been with us for 100 years or more, are now "coming to a head." In principle, he suggested, there is "not a great distance between us." Finally, he agreed to the establishment of a negotiating committee, although reserving his opinion as to its proper composition.

It appears from all this that the Government is moving to a new position. If the Prime Minister is agreeable to a negotiation, he must now be persuaded that there is something to negotiate. While he has not yet given detailed study to the document, he has certainly been briefed generally on its contents; indeed, he commented favorably on a particular aspect of it, the definition of an Indian as proposed by the Brotherhood. There can, therefore, be little doubt that he was aware on Wednesday of at least the central points proposed for negotiation.

As the Indians plainly state in their paper: "The corner stone of the settlement is land." If they are to develop the land themselves, as the government feels they should, there is an obvious prerequisite; they must have the land to develop and they do not have it now.

But they are not in the position of the prairie tribes. The historic treaties, in their view, were attempts to change the Indian from hunter to farmer. They do not propose to farm rocks in the Yukon but they do observe that the development of other resources has made it the richest area in the country at the moment (although 90 per cent of their people live below the poverty line).

Since land is of little use without the resources to develop it, they are also seeking a cash settlement, to take account also of past grievances. This would include a continuing flow of funds from hunting revenues, royalty payments, royalties on forest production and a share in proceeds from oil, gas and mineral production. They have fairly detailed plans for the various programs (training, research, development, relocation, municipal) to which these settlement funds would be dedicated over the first ten years.

More Meaningful

What is in prospect, therefore, is a far more meaningful negotiation than anything ever known before in the dealings of the Government of Canada with native peoples. It is an illusion to suppose that there can ever be a meeting of equals when one party is sovereign.

If the Yukon Indians succeed, however, they will not be at all like the chiefs and band members who in former times set their marks on pieces of paper, the meaning of which they only dimly understood. Their position will be relatively strong, partly because of the planning efforts they have made themselves, partly because of the support they have found in general public opinion, and partly because the Alaskan settlements were bound to have important implications for the native people in Canada.

Something else favors them. There are no provincial complications north of '60 as there are, for example, in British Columbia and at James Bay. The federal government has complete jurisdiction over the land and resources and is, therefore, in a position to deal.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Double Taxation

Last year I paid municipal taxes in the amount of approximately $1,000 on the house which I own and in which I live. Since this came out of my personal income, I also had to pay to the Federal Government taxes amounting to approximately $275 bringing the total amount out of income to about $1,275. This is double taxation.

For all other classes of municipal taxpayers the municipal taxes are deductible from income. Industrial municipal taxpayers deduct their taxes from income; so do apartment owners and building owners of any kind who rent. Indirectly, any person who rents any building or part thereof is exempt. If I rent out my own home I am exempt, but if I live in it I am double-taxed.

This, of course, is grossly unfair, but very little has been done about it.—F. R. Moore, 2386 Queenswood Drive.

Joe Doakes Pays

I believe the new B.C. government proposes to raise corporation tax and has rejected the idea of raising the personal income tax. Demagoguery is a further burden on the people. It seems an inevitable accompaniment to the debilitating disease of socialism.

To clamor for higher corporation taxes in B.C. instead of increases in personal income taxes is sheer sophistry, or worse, ignorance.

Surely even to the simplest it is apparent that all corporation tax is paid by the consumer. Income tax, like rent or raw materials, is just another expense to a corporation. No corporation has any money save the money it receives for its products or services. The alternative would be to print its own money, a practice severely frowned upon by the federal government, which very righteously reserves this swindle for itself.

It follows that increased costs, including higher income taxes are immediately passed on to old Joe Doakes. For a people's legislator to scream "Soak the corporations" is seen to be dishonest or to be ignorant of the facts of life. — M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra St.

Let's Keep It

Your recent cartoon, letter to the editor, and press releases have all sided against the government decision not to run a night ferry between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen. I, for one, don't want one, and most of the "little people" to whom I have talked don't either. It is not the public in your cartoon who is crying. Pressure for a night ferry comes from Chambers of Commerce, tourist groups, truckers, and other commercial interests.

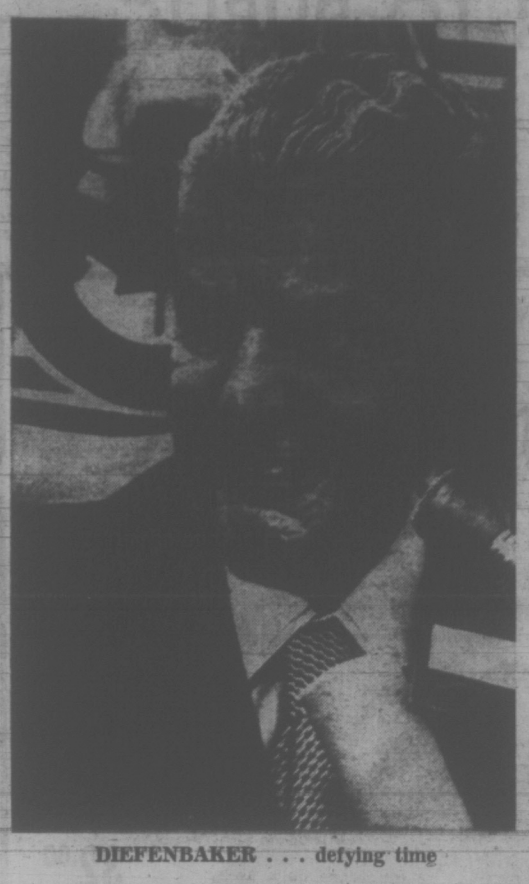

To them, additional ferries mean increased business and profits. To me increased ferries mean less enjoyment on the highway, less open space beside it, less clear air, less quiet and less of many things which I cannot buy, but which are mine because I live here where the environmental quality is now fairly high. Let's keep it this way!— K. C. Gibbard, 4450 Narvaez Crescent.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of Feb. 15, 1913:

DUNCAN: Since the beginning of the month a number of panthers have been shot in the district and the bounty of $15 a head claimed from the government. Albert Holman was responsible for three, all of which were shot on Mount Sicker, one being a large male panther measuring 8 feet 6 inches. The others were females. A. F. Fuller shot one at Sahtlam and James Boal one in the Helmcken district. C. Jordan claimed the bounty for a wolf shot at Sahtlam.

DIEFENBAKER . . . defying time

Parliament's Shining Star: The Chief

By DOUGLAS FISHER

He's 78 years old. His wife to whom he is so close has been ailing. It's 10 years since he was turned away by the electorate from the leadership of the land and five and a half years since he lost the leadership of his party.

In terms of contemporaries he seems a good part of a generation past his time. Yet he is in a golden period all his own. He seems even sharper mentally than he was in his days of power. Who? He is variously Chief Walking Buffalo or Chief Eagle or Chief Many Spotted Horses or Chief Great Eagle.

John Diefenbaker is having a grand time. There's a renaissance of appreciation of him in Ottawa. He has given two excellent speeches in this young session. He has nasty questions on the written order paper. He has a fascinating motion of his own on the House agenda. He's a regular star of the daily question period.

David Lewis is perhaps the only other MP who has his command of the place and who consistently radiates that sense of diverse skill and stamina you find in the great pros of sport and theatre and politics.

He still makes ordinary people in politics feel awkward. He takes advantage of it in the House. He is always pressing beyond the rights and rules of the place which govern his peers. And he is indulged by almost everyone . . . the speaker, the prime minister, the other experienced members. He both stiffens the new members with awe while he enthrals them with his oratorical footwork. His inventiveness in attack and comparisons, his figures of speech, his pacing, above all his sheer outrageousness as a posturing, great elder statesman adds up to a vintage masterpiece.

Last week, after Diefenbaker had been at his best in the question period, a young reporter who came to Ottawa to work during the first Trudeau Ministry, expressed an opinion to me that would have been heretical short months ago.

"You know," he said, "I really think Diefenbaker is smarter than Trudeau. He's got a better mind. Don't you think so?"

I thought at once about the remarks made to me a few days before, by a man who had been instrumental in part in organizing the ouster of Diefenbaker from the leadership of the Progressive Conservative Party.

"How bright is John Diefenbaker? Ah, he's formidable. But high intelligence doesn't guarantee balance and judgment. He's a man who always has crony followers, never colleagues. A great leader must have a huge ego but his is so grand that there is no room in it for colleagues and their sensitivities and advice. What is disaster in governing, may not be in opposition."

Each of our prime ministers in this century have been very well endowed with intelligence and, indeed, with resolution. Perhaps more important, all but the incumbent proved that they had unusual stamina.

Diefenbaker's mental quickness has always mesmerized me. Particularly as it is demonstrated with an audience. Messrs. King, St. Laurent, Pearson and Trudeau were from competent to mediocre in this classic role of a political leader. Stanfield is only occasionally passable. Perhaps Joey Smallwood and Tommy Douglas, perhaps Real Caouette, are the examples which make fair comparisons.

The Social Credit leader, for all his wit and speed, rests the burden of his oratory on an evangelicism — a simple theory of money on the one hand, of injustice to the meek and the short-shrifted ones.

Douglas can, with large audiences, match the Diefenbaker excellence at storytelling. Each has a marvellous felicity at humorous anecdotes. Each has had the aloofness of the loner in relationships with colleagues and followers. But Douglas as a performer on the hustings or in the House is less devious in argument and much narrower in his range of allusion and examples. He has much less of a sense of history. He is less the burrowing and eclectic reader of history and biography. Frankly, Douglas is not as mean and wounding as Diefenbaker with his rivals. Not as tough, not as resilient, not as thick-skinned.

By the time Smallwood came upon the national scene, he was in command of his bailiwick. He and Diefenbaker seemed peers in fertility of argument. Certainly, the Newfoundland Premier had an edge in volubility. He was a match in gall and nerve. But he never showed, perhaps never had the chance to show, the same resilience, the bounce back from adversity, from a deep, pervading antagonism of all the best, right-thinking people who count such as Diefenbaker faced from 1961 to 1968.

Who would have believed that after the brutal repudiation by his party on the convention floor at Maple Leaf Gardens in 1967 that six years later John Diefenbaker would be volleying and thundering . . . and captivating.

Jack Pickersgill has gone to retirement. Lester Pearson is dead. His bete-noire and fellow rookie in the House year of 1940, George McIlraith, has gone to the Senate. Paul Hellyer, old Diefenbaker rival, has changed sides.

In an odd way, Diefenbaker's continuing incandescence has come, at long length, to be an asset to Robert Stanfield. He now diverts the critical appraisal which undermines a party leader.

Five and a half years is a relatively long time for a leader of the official opposition to expose himself. Yet there has been no mounting urgency to replace him. The tendency is fading which contrasted him unfavorably with his predecessor or now, even with the Prime Minister who, after 1968, seemed to guarantee with his new style and popularity an absolute eclipse of the Diefenbaker qualities.

The Chief, despite his faults and fetishes, is defying time and passing on the torch of parliamentary standards so recently thought passed by, by electronics and task-forces.

IT'S TIME TO GET OUT—BUT WE WON'T

Do We Need NORAD Anymore?

By JAMES EAYRS

Three months to go until May 12 — the date by which we must decide whether or not to renew the NORAD Agreement. As we enter the home stretch, are we in a lather of debate? Hardly. The public mood is torpid. And it's not to be blamed for that.

Debate in Canada over whether it was wise for us to pool commands and weapons with the Americans in a joint effort to defend North America against an attack by Soviet bombers is almost as old as NORAD itself. After 15 years it's getting stale.

It's also getting all fouled up by jargon as the technology of air defence gets more and more elaborate. That makes it difficult for citizens to get their minds attuned and tongues around. In 1958 the debate turned on whether a non-atomic Bomarc could bring down a Soviet Bear. (Not likely, unless it hit amidships.) Today it turns on the utility to Canada of Over-the-Horizon Backscatter radar, and it's easy to understand why that topic is not currently under scrutiny in town hall meetings from sea even unto shining sea.

Futile Appeal

Besides, is it really the responsibility of democratic citizenship to keep up with the literature of strategy? "Just voiced was another appeal for citizens to spend more time to make themselves fully informed on foreign policy and national security problems," mused a member of the U.S. State Department's Policy Planning Staff at some conference or other. "I, who spend my professional time doing just this and yet fall hugely short, can scarcely imagine anything less probable or more futile than to get everyone engrossed over things so intractable — when there are children to rear, mail to deliver, bread to bake, streets to sweep, sick to attend, and myriad other things to do to keep us a going concern."

The alternative is to leave it to philosopher-kings—which is even less attractive than sweating it out for ourselves. For our philosopher-kings demonstrably don't know what they're doing when it comes to contriving the best of all possible defence relationships with the United States Air Force.

At the outset this was true in its most literal sense. The same consideration which caused the Diefenbaker government to scrap the Avro Arrow — that bombers being obsolete, aircraft to intercept them were obsolete as well — ought to have caused it to back away from a joint Canada-U.S. air defence command. When the records of 1957-58 are revealed, it will be seen that when the Diefenbaker cabinet agreed to the NORAD proposal placed before it by its military advisers, it did not fully understand what it was getting into.

What has been needed and what has been done have always been out of synch in Canada's North American air defence policies. During the period of gravest danger of a Soviet bomber strike at North America — from the end of the Second World War to the advent of Sputnik — we turned down U.S. proposals for joint commands and integrated strategies. When the Soviets advanced from bombers to missiles we entered NORAD to deter bombers.

Some justification was needed and was soon contrived. The bomber, NORAD's advocates argued, had not been made obsolete by missiles, it had merely become marginal. But you needed to defend against marginal weapons. Otherwise the bomber would get a free ride, droning unopposed against secondary targets — a Toronto, a Montreal, a Vancouver — in a North America missiles had already destroyed.

You only had to say that over to yourself four or five times to realize how utterly implausible the scenario of a Soviet bomber attack had become in the era of the ICBM launched from silos and from submarines. But implausibility does not deter an air force planner avid for more hardware.

In due course other rationales appeared. A favorite of the U.S. Air Force was that, in the words of one of its secretaries, "air defences play a critical role in complicating the enemy's attack problem." To which an appropriate reply was forthcoming from a civilian, Dr. Jeremy Stone: "If our bomber defense just complicates the other side's problems, it will figure out the complications. We do not think just giving work to his systems analysts is a sensible thing to do."

Sophisticated View

It might be asked — and was — why, if the missile made the bomber obsolete, do the Soviets hang on to bombers? One answer, assuming a lack of sophistication among the Moscow policy community, is that they don't know any better. Another answer, assuming a great deal of strategic sophistication among the Moscow policy community, has been suggested by Dr. Colin S. Gray, the British scholar whose recent work on Canada and NORAD is by far the best on the subject: "The Soviet Long Range Airforce may be maintained solely to generate cost ineffective expenditures in North America, to promote the expenditure by the United States and Canada of $1.2 — $1.4 billion per annum on air defence and to stimulate emulative arms race activity."

If that is indeed the Soviet objective, it is on the verge of attaining a stunning success. NORAD presently functions with the same basic equipment with which it began 15 years ago. That equipment — a mix of fighter-interceptors and various ranges of radars of 1950s vintage — was designed to work against high altitude attack. But U.S. B-52s targetted on Moscow and Leningrad (as distinct from Hanoi and Haiphong) are trained to seep in low beneath the radar, and bombers of the Soviet Long Range Air Force must be presumed to train the same way.

Against low-flying Soviet bombers NORAD's defences are helpless. Instead of arriving at the conclusion that it does not matter — the missile being the weapon of the attacker's choice — the Pentagon planners have arrived at the conclusion that it does not matter that it does not matter. They are attempting to introduce the weapons necessary to counter the kind of bomber attack NORAD's existing weapons cannot counter — never mind that they do not have to counter.

Four new systems are in varying stages of development. There is the aforementioned Over-the Horizon Backscatter radar (OTH-B), giving earlier and wider warning than the DEW line does. There is the Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS), putting radar into converted Boeing 707s. There is the new improved manned interceptor, for which the leading contender is McDonnell's F-15, darling of the U.S.A.F., 20 of which now ordered for testing are supposed to cost, with their spare parts, $1,146,385,000. (If they are like every other new military aircraft they will cost far more than is estimated.) And there is a new improved surface to air missile to take the place of the Nike-Hercules and Hawks.

All this weaponry in the works makes that much more likely a hike in our NORAD membership dues, now flattened out at something close to $140,000,000 yearly. How much more a hike is anybody's guess.

We should be getting out of NORAD while the getting out is good. Need it be added that we're staying in instead? "When it is not necessary to change," Paul Martin used to intone, "it is necessary not to change." That remains the spirit in which our foreign and defence policies are made. It is a formula for silent surrender — if we do not go bankrupt first.

$140 million a year and our dues are going up.

Toil and Its Rewards

RUSSELL BAKER

"The work ethic" is one of those insidious short-hand terms — "women's liberation" is another — that seem to be useful for speeding conversation on to more vital essentials, but aren't. What those terms usually do, instead, is sidetrack conversation into vacuity and noise.

Politicians just now are immoderate in lip service to "the work ethic," from which we may assume that "the work ethic," whatever it may be, is a first-magnitude vote-puller, right up there with "home" and "mother" among the treasured Americana all good-guy politicians will fight for until the last television floodlights go off.

We are presumed to reverence "the work ethic." And yet, after we have all agreed upon our devotion to it, how many of us would agree on what we were talking about?

The complicated idea for which "the work ethic" is shorthand has eroded down into a slogan, a shouted viva! from politicians certain that we, their conditioned audience, will return an automatic round of applause.

The term seems to be fairly new. A few years ago the cut-the-budget faction in Washington went through a period of talking about "the Puritan ethic," which would presumably have been honored by a cut in federal outlays. "The Puritan ethic" never caught on. Who knows? Maybe because the stereotype Puritan, that blue-nosed child of repressed emotion, was all wrong for an age of Americans that had coined the battle cry, "Let it all hang out!"

Whatever the explanation, "ethic" survived when the "Puritan" failed, and when the public revulsion against welfare programs began to gather, there was good, sturdy, high-flown old "ethic," sounding like something high-minded we remembered from grave philosophy courses in college.

Sensitive, humane statesmen — as politicians quite naturally think of themselves — could scarcely go along with the more passionate welfare-haters' complaints that the recipients of the state's dole were "bums." The thought had to be agreed to — political reality can be very harsh at times — but the language was awkward. A solution was passionately required, and it turned out to be "the work ethic."

The trouble with welfare was that it violated "the work ethic." People on welfare were corrupted away from "the work ethic." And so on. As a piece of political shorthand for putting a tone of spiritual uplift into razor attacks on welfare, "the work ethic" has had the virtue of softening discourse at a time when some softening was much needed.

The phrase has become so popular, however, that we may be in danger of kidding ourselves into believing there is a "work ethic" that is vital to the nation. The fact, of course, is that the great argument for working hard, except among those who suffered repressed childhoods, has never been that hard work is good for you.

The reason for working hard was that the hard work might just possibly make you rich enough to enjoy a later life of leisure and easy days. In short, hard work had no ethical value; it was a means to an end, and the end was the option to no work at all.

Advancing national cynicism seems to have lessened the masses' faith in their chances of getting rich through hard work, although this is by no means demonstrable. What is demonstrable — we have just had an official report documenting it — is a spreading boredom of fatigue with the jobs that working Americans have.

There are many sociological theories about this. We needn't buy any of them to observe that the quality of much work being performed nowadays suggests that too many workers are not happy in their work. If Americans are so devoted to a "work ethic," how can they muster conscience to take pay for second-rate and sabotaged jobs?

It is surely not devotion to the spiritual value of toil that animates such persons to cheer politicians who demand more devotion to "the work ethic." It seems more likely that they are hooting at the jobless out of the malice of envy.

Backbencher Seeks Takeovers Of Cable TV, Gas, Recycling

The provincial government was urged Wednesday by one of its backbenchers to take over administration of three areas of business activity in the province.

Harold Steves (NDP-Richmond) said the government should take over the province's cable television operations, production and distribution of natural gas products and waste material recycling projects.

Steves said government-owned cable television facilities could be used to expand educational television service in the province. Programs could be produced by citizens' groups and by students in their own communities, he proposed, and broadcast either locally or over a provincial network. An example of the system in operation was a recent telecast of a Seattle city council hearing on Channel 9, he said.

Steves said the cable television system could be regulated through B.C. Tel, which the government has already committed itself to taking over sometime in the future.

The cable systems depend on B.C. Tel for their survival, Steves said. Poles are leased from the company and cable lines strung alongside B.C. Tel lines.

He said a publicly-owned cable system could be set up with a minimum of public expense. "I see the use of television as a self-educating system of communication. I hope to see the day when we have a community and government-owned and controlled cable TV system in this province."

Steves said the government could save itself a lot of money by getting directly into the recycling business. He said as much as a ton of newprint passes through the buildings every day and could be recycled into useful products.

"I would suggest that the government should get into the collection and recycling business directly and help preserve some of our resources and help clean up the environment in a positive way," Steves said. "The social, environmental and even economic advantage of recycling our resources should be obvious to all."

Steves commended the government's action in reducing taxes on liquid natural gas and propane. He said more people should be encouraged to convert their automobiles from use of gasoline to use of natural gas and propane since there is much less pollution involved. Cost of such conversion runs at about $350 to $450, he said, but can result in savings in the long run for consumers.

In order to make it easier for people to use natural gas in their vehicles, the Richmond MLA suggested that the existing subsidiary of B.C. Hydro which deals in natural gas—Red Star Petroleum—be expanded "to take over all existing natural gas wells and transmission pipelines and enter into the production and distribution of natural gas."

He said natural gas depots could be set up throughout the province and the government's vehicles converted to natural gas use "to show we mean business." This could be extended to the B.C. Hydro buses on order, he said.

And Steves took a swipe at opposition critics who have objected to increased royalties on petroleum, "a rapidly diminishing non-reusable resource."

"I say for shame. May you soak your heads in an oil spill and choke on your own exhaust."

TALKS OPEN TO PUBLIC

All communications between B.C. and Ottawa on the subject of port development in the province will be opened to the public if the federal government agrees, Premier Barrett told the legislature Wednesday.

Barrett was speaking in response to a motion proposed by Ed Smith (SC-North Peace) that all correspondence and information on development of ports in B.C. be filed with the house.

The premier said he has no objections to making the information public and expressed surprise that Smith, a former Social Credit government backbencher, did not have knowledge himself of the background information concerning port development in the north and on the lower mainland.

"I'm not like the previous government," Barrett said. "If we table anything at all, we will table everything."

He added that he will be writing a letter to the federal government later this week to ask for permission to have the communications made public and he expects Ottawa's agreement.

In light of the problems of communication between the two levels of government on the port issue, including considerable mud-slinging between Barrett and federal Environment Minister Jack Davis, Hugh Curtis (PC-Saanich and the Islands) threw in:

"Make sure you put a return address on it."

16th Century Mass Sunday At Cathedral

A pontificial mass in 16th century style will be sung in St. Andrew's Cathedral Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

The mass will be sung by University of Victoria Singers, conducted by George Corwin, to music provided by members of the Collegium Musicum, directed by Dr. Christine Mather.

Wind instruments of the 16th century — the shawn, dulzian, krummhorns, recorders and sackbut — will be featured.

Dr. Mather emphasized that this is not a concert but a mass. It will be celebrated by Bishop Remi De Roo.

North University Proposed by MLA

Daisy Webster (NDP-Vancouver South) Wednesday urged establishment of a university in the northern part of the province.

She said New Caledonia College, located in Prince George, would serve as a logical site for such a university with expansion of the college's existing facilities.

There are more than 65,000 students in elementary and secondary schools in the north, Webster said, with an increasing demand for courses in all areas.

She said the university could serve to meet the needs for education of the Indian people of the north as well as offer higher education facilities to northern students without making them go through a total disruption of their life styles, which is necessitated through study at the universities in Vancouver and Victoria.

Study areas could be developed, she said, which would be tailored to the problems of the north and of Indian people.

She urged the government to establish a northern university within five years.

Webster also gave evidence of the disparities in salary between men and women in the educational institutions of the province. She said women have seldom been encouraged to try for higher positions in educational management and are therefore not adequately represented in the higher levels of administration.

"The women of this province are on the march," she said. "And as the saying goes, 'hell hath no fury like a woman scorned.' We look forward to a new day when all discrimination will be a thing of the past."

76,209 Collect Home Grants

Since it came into operation under the former Social Credit government in 1966 the provincial home acquisition grant has paid out a total of $45.1 million to 76,209 home purchasers.

The information was provided Wednesday by Finance Minister Dave Barrett, in answers to questions filed earlier by Victoria Social Credit MLA Newell Morrison.

WELFARE BILL: $137M

Social assistance recipients in B.C. last year fell from 126,707 in January to 105,151 in October—a drop of 21,566.

Filing answers to questions in the legislature Wednesday, Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said the total expenditure on social assistance in 1972 was $137 million.

The highest total, $16.4 million, was paid out during March and the lowest, $5.3 million, during April.

Listen closely to all you hear from Plymouth. We've found new ways to keep it quiet.

For 1973, Plymouth is quieter than ever before. Satellite's front and rear suspension systems, for instance, have been isolated from the Unibody with rubber pads. This stops most of the road shock and noise from travelling through to the body of the car. Plymouth's Unibody construction helps too. Its one-piece welded strength stays tight and quiet for years. Inside, quiet surrounds you. Passenger compartments have been insulated from bumper to bumper. Outside, we've lowered noise levels too, by designing new air intake and exhaust systems.

As well as being the quietest Satellite ever, this year it's the smoothest running Satellite. Electronic Ignition eliminates the breaker points and condenser so it's virtually maintenance free. You'll go further between tuneups, and your exhaust will stay cleaner longer. Electronic Ignition is standard on every North American built Plymouth this year.

Satellite's 2-door hardtop may look like a sporty personal car, but its size and features make it enough car for most families—and all their luggage. Its 115 inch wheel base is easy to handle, and easy to park. A 318 V8 delivers plenty of power, with remarkable gas economy. There's also a money-saver 225 slant Six available. See the quiet, new 1973 Satellite at your Plymouth dealers now!

Boat Show May Cut Exhibits

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Rennie, general manager of the Pacific National Exhibition, said Wednesday that if Vancouver city council is going to enforce its demands for displacement of part of the PNE's boat show next week, it will have to find a way to break some contracts.

Rennie said the contracts are signed and that the PNE doesn't know how it can avoid honoring them.

The dispute concerns council's demand that part of the boat show be moved out of The Forum arena so the PNE Minor Hockey Association won't have to interrupt its playoff schedule.

Council issued the demand, despite the fact the PNE is independent of council in the area of rentals allocations.

Robert O'Loughlin, head of Harmon O'Loughlin Enterprises Ltd., which put the boat show together, noted that sports celebrities Johnny Unitas, Mickey Mantle and Bill Russell had been booked for an appearance in The Forum and that "we have had contracts signed since March of 1972."

Duncan Honors Sportsmen

DUNCAN — Three local citizens have been honored by the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce for their work in sports.

Duff and Patricia Chaster, longtime Duncan residents, were named sportsmen of the year at the annual chamber installation banquet. Dr. Wolfgang Schamberger, a distance runner who placed second in the 1972 Canadian Olympic trails, received the athlete of the year award.

Sixteen-year-old Lynne Beecroft, and Chemainus resident Jim Irvine were runners-up for the athlete of the year award, presented by hockey personality Babe Pratt.

Also at the event, Dick Gill took over the chamber presidency from past-president Patrick Mullins who delivered his annual report and outlined some of the chamber's achievements over the past year.

Charge Cominco —Union

TRAIL (CP) — The Trail local of the United Steelworkers of America Wednesday asked Resources Minister Robert Williams to charge Cominco Ltd. in connection with an alleged spill of 125 tons of zinc waste into the Columbia River.

In a letter to the minister, the local said the spill occurred here Jan. 27. It said the waste had a high acid content and Cominco failed to register the spill with the Pollution Control Branch.

The Steelworkers asked that Cominco be required to discharge all industrial waste into a holding pond and to report accidental discharges.

The union also asked Williams to establish and enforce standards for the discharge of industrial effluent and to establish a Pollution Control Board office here.

Arson Suspected

CLOVERDALE (CP) — Several pieces of farm equipment were destroyed as fire leveled a 150-foot storage shed at a B.C. Forest Service nursery.

A spokesman for Cloverdale RCMP said arson is suspected.

Nursery administrator Dave Armit estimated loss at $80,000 to build and contents. He said none of the 25 million tree seedlings grown and stored at the nursery were damaged.

Studies

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for Shelpac Research and Developments Ltd., promoters of a $200 million coal pipeline from the East Kootenays to Roberts Bank, said Wednesday it will be some time before a formal application to build the line is made to the provincial government.

D. F. Norris, land manager for Shelpac, said several studies still have to be completed.

Runway Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greater Vancouver Regional District has urged Ottawa not to proceed with construction of a new runway at Vancouver International Airport until impact studies are made. The GVRD has also called on the provincial government to become involved in the issue.

School Budget Up

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The school board here gave final approval to a $15.4 million operating budget for 1973. The total budget is $20,766,898, a 19.6 per cent increase over the 1972 budget.

Pair Cleared

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Paul Schneider, 43, and his wife, Ludmilia, 36, have been cleared in district court of causing the death of their neighbor, Thomas Redmond, 44. The Schneiders were tried on a reduced charge of assault causing bodily harm after Redmond's death Sept. 26. A coroner's jury found Redmond died of a heart attack after an argument and a short fight with the Schneiders over complaints his cattle were on their land.

Pets Killed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Arson is suspected in a fire that did extensive damage to a variety store in Vancouver, police said Wednesday. The fire killed several animals in an adjoining pet shop. Investigators said a combustible liquid ignited against a wall in the variety store.

Bylaw to Stay

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — Council has refused any change in its Mobile Home Bylaw to accommodate Donald Fraser, a paraplegic living in an illegally-parked mobile home. Council did grant a 30-day extension to the eviction notice so alternate means of housing Fraser could be found.

Gun Training

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — A coroner's jury investigating the Feb. 7 shooting death of Kenneth Robert Steele, 18, of Maple Ridge, recommended a gun training program for boys in this age group be made available by schools. The jury ruled the boy's death unnatural and accidental. He was killed when he and two friends were playing with a shotgun.

25 Capsules Convict Trafficker

A 33-year-old Victoria man was convicted of possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking Wednesday when county court Judsge Tyrwhitt-Drake ruled that 25 capsules is more than the simple user is likely to have.

Daniel Arthur Lansall, 1243 Oscar, was arrested Sept. 7 while in possession of a balloon containing 25 caps of heroin.

Const. Michael Onischuk, a four-year member of the RCMP Victoria sub-division drug section and former undercover agent, was called by Prosecutor Michael Hutchisnon to give opinion evidence.

From his experience "the most common way of distributing heroin is in the balloon or condom which contains 25 capsules," he said.

He said a balloon can be purchased for $250 and a person buying a balloon can buy heroin for $10 to $12 a cap, depending on the supply and demand. The cost of buying one cap at a time is about $20.

TWO-CAP HABIT

If a person in Victoria buys 25 or 50 caps of heroin "it is the practice to traffic," he said, "I've yet to see a heroin addict buy more than two caps at a time."

In summation, defence counsel David Lysson said Lansall had a habit of two caps a day at the time of his arrest. Twenty-five caps would keep him supplied for 12 or 13 days and buying drugs by the balloon would cost half as much as buying a cap a day.

He also said daily purchases would provide more opportunities for detection by the police.

"The less frequently a purchase has to be made, the less risk," he said.

The Crown was attempting to invite the judge to make an inference from the amount of heroin, said Lysson.

"The quantity involved here . . . is more than the simple user is likely to have on him at one time. It's very difficult to find any other inference," said Drake.

SURVEILLANCE

Testimony given by Const. Robert Bowen, of Victoria RCMP sub-division drug section, was that Lansall's former home, 915 McNaughton, was under surveillance by Bowen and Const. David McGregor of Saanich police about 11 p.m. on Sept. 7.

Lansall came out of the house, walked to the edge of the back yard, looked up and down the street, then went near the fence and crouched from the view of the two officers, watching from a neighbor's yard, Bowen testified.

The officers jumped the fence and chased the accused toward the street. During the chase Lansall made a throwing motion as he passed some flowers, said Bowen.

He was apprehended by Bowen, and McGregor shone a flashlight in his mouth to check for drugs.

The area was searched and the balloon was found sitting on a leaf.

McGregor, attached to the RCMP drug section last September, told the court Lansall was handcuffed and taken to an interview room at Victoria police department.

During the interview McGregor noticed a fresh needle track and "numerous" other needle marks on the accused's arms.

Under cross-examination by Lysson, McGregor testified that he did not see Lansall holding the heroin at any time and did not see any object leave his hand when he made the throwing motion.

Lysson told the judge there was no evidence that the balloon couldn't have been on the leaf for a substantial period of time and that it is a natural reaction to run when approached by two men in the dark.

Hutchison argued the balloon had been found in the area where Lansall had made the throwing motion and it's position indicated it couldn't have been there long.

Before ruling on the possession aspect of the charge, the judge said from the circumstances "I am quite unable to come to any other inference."

He remanded the case to Feb. 28 for sentence. The charge carries a possible sentence of life imprisonment, said Drake, and he ordered Lansall be held in custody while awaiting sentence.

ELEVATOR PROBE?

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia government is seeking a multiprovince agreement to establish an industrial inquiry commission into the five-month dispute between the Canadian Elevator Manufacturers Association and the International Union of Elevator Constructors.

Following three weeks of behind-the-scenes work by Nova Scotia's Deputy Labor Minister Ray Anderson, Labor Minister Scott MacNutt announced in the legislature Wednesday that most provinces are in agreement with the proposed commission.

Of the provinces likely to take part in such a commission, only British Columbia and Manitoba remain to be heard from and both are understood to be receptive.

Saskatchewan and Alberta lack the legislative machinery to participate, Ontario is involved in negotiations and Quebec has ordered its workers back.

MacNutt noted that negotiations with mediator W. H. Dickie, Ontario's assistant deputy labor minister, were adjourned Feb. 9 and no formal meetings are scheduled.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 19-year-old Saanich man who pleaded guilty to possessing hashish was granted a conditional discharge in provincial court Wednesday because there was "no selfish reason" behind his request for leniency.

Judge William Ostler granted the conditional discharge to Delan Ralph Kunitz, 3326 Panther, based on two factors: the future of a child and a landmark ruling for Canadian courts established by the B.C. Appeal Court in Vancouver earlier this week.

Kunitz was found guilty Jan. 25 following a trial on a charge of possession of a small amount of hashish last Sept. 28 in Bastion Square.

In pronouncing sentence, which includes a six-month peace bond, Judge Ostler said: It is obvious there is a specific reason for asking for a discharge and in this light I regard it as not a selfish reason."

Kunitz's child was the first factor mentioned by defence lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood.

Kunitz said his baby daughter had been given up for adoption by her mother and he was asking the B.C. Supreme Court for custody of the child.

Owen-Flood then mentioned the Apeal Court ruling in Vancouver Tuesday granting an absolute discharge to Robert Hampton, 46, of 1580 Despard, who had appealed a decision last Sept. 16 by Ostler against such a discharge and in favor of a $250 fine of shoplifting.

The case was a landmark in that it was said to be the first appeal against a lower court's refusal to grant a discharge to reach a higher court in Canada.

"The man has a natural child and wishes to go before Supreme Court to ask for custody in view of certain evidence," Ostler told provincial court Wednesday.

"I grant a discharge because it would be in the best interest of the accused" and "it is in the public interest that that honorable court (B.C. Supreme Court) be enabled to determine the application . . . on the basis of what is in the best interest of the child."

It is in the best interest of the public, he said that "the custody application should be unencumbered" by such a conviction.

James Robert Jenkins, 2083 Meadow was sentenced to three months imprisonment and 18 months' probation on a charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency by having sexual intercourse with a 14-year-old girl.

Ostler called Jenkins "a young man who was in a position of sensitivity and trust, who was indeed a child-care worker, and whilst in this position was using a 14-year-old girl."

He pleaded guilty in December. Ostler ordered him to stay away from the girl unles he had her parents' permision.

The case of a 20-year-old Victoria man, who was so overcome by remorse that he turned himself in to police after breaking into an apartment, was adjourned to March 1 for a pre-sentence report.

David L. Ryan, 1083 Redfern, entered an apartment at 1233 Fairfield, Feb. 13, by slipping the lock on the door. He stole $1.80 in dimes from a piggy bank and four packages of cigarettes.

David C. F. Smith, 18, of 134 St. Lawrence was fined $75 after he was convicted of possesing a matchbox of hashish.

Smith was arrested by Saanich police Nov. 9, in a restaurant parking lot.

Lavern A. Kropp, 47, of 2903 North Park, was fined a total of $600 on two separate charges of impaired driving and refusing to take a breathalyzer test.

Milk Hike Asked

REGINA (CP) — The costs of producing fluid milk in Saskatchewan rose 18 per cent last year and dairymen reacted Wednesday by calling for an immediate 15 per cent increase in the price they get for milk.

The call for the higher return came from delegates attending the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Milk Producers Association.

All Parties Back B.C. Aid for Vietnam

The B.C. legislature unanimously moved Wednesday to have the government consider establishing a medical facility for the "rehabilitation, care and development" of children in Vietnam.

The motion was proposed by Allan Williams (L-West Vancouver-Howe Sound) and received the support of all four parties in the ensuring debate and voting.

Several speakers used the debate as an opportunity to criticize the former Social Credit government, the federal Liberal government and the United States for their various actions — and lack of actions — in keeping the Vietnam war going for as long as it has, but all speakers backed the idea of establishing some kind of facility for the betterment of the devastated country's children.

"We should be prepared at this time, as we discuss this province's budget, to carve out of our wealth some small measure of monies by by which the blameless children of Vietnam can be afforded the opportunity of being restored from the ravages of war," Williams said.

He added that no differentiation should be made between children of North and South Vietnam. The only consideration should be that children be helped and the only question should be "what help do your need?," Williams said.

Speaking for the government, Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said some consideration has already been given to helping the people of Vietnam and that the gomernment will need some time to work out specific details.

"The government agrees with the principle of this motion and we should just get on with the job," Hall said.

Government backbenchers Karen Sanford (NDP—Comox) and Harold Steves (NDP—Richmond) both criticized the federal government for not taking a position against the war and Steves attacked the U.S. government for its method of using Canada to do its research and production of war materials.

Mines Minister Leo Nimsick criticized the former Socred regime for never accepting the NDP's persistent attempts to condemn the Vietnam was and said Canadians should feel a "twinge of conscience" for indirectly contributing to the U.S.'s war effort.

Premier Barret closed the debate by saying the province's contribution should be regarded as a gift from the children of British Columbia to the children of Vietnam.

This was one opportunity for the legislature, Barrett said, to show the children of the province that their elected representatives could do something constructive for a change.

PHIL'S ROADS NOT PERFECT

MLAs were told Wednesday they should not assume that just because a former Social Credit highways minister (Phil Gaglardi) represeed Kamloops, the highwasy in that area of the province are just fine.

"My friends, it just ain't so," said Gerry Anderson, the NDP backbencher who represents that riding.

His comments came as he welcomed, in the budget debate, the additional $33.5 million allocated to the highways department's spending. Anderson said some of that money could be put to good use in the Kamloops area.

In a wide-ranging speech Anderson said the best method of assuring "labor peace" in B.C. will be to devise a general profit-sharing scheme for all employees, possibly through a bonus based on a company's quarterly statement.

He also called for government action to stop the loss of large tracts of ranchland which are bought up by U.S. corporations and individuals, the latter including movie actors who regard ranch ownership in Canada as a form of status symbol.

He urged the government to introduce stricter hunting regulations to counteract the steady depletion of moose, elk and other wildlife. Anderson said he knows of cases where the husband uses up his three-tag limit on shooting deer and then takes out another three under his wife's name.

That, he said, amounted to "butchery for the sake of butchery."

Flood Disasters Cost B.C. $7.7M

A total of $7.7 million was paid out last year by the provincial government's Flood Disaster Relief Fund, according to information filed in the legislature Wednesday by Finance Minister Dave Barrett.

In answers to questions tabled earlier by Liberal leader David Anderson, Barrett said 3,066 applications for relief were received in 1972 and of these 2,897 were approved and another three approved in part.

He said the total amount requested by all applicants was not known as the claims were generally subject to adjustment by assessors and the adjudicated amounts agreed to by claimants.

$16,701 DIVIDES MPs BRIGHTLY

OTTAWA (CP) — It cost the government $7,875 to get 150 members of the dracaena family potted and put in the Federal Confederation Building last year, the public works department reported Monday.

Another $5,250 was spent for the same purpose for 100 schefflera, $2,625 for 50 ficus decora and $951 for 12 philodendron selloun.

To keep them in the building, adjacent to the Parliament Buildings, and used for MP's offices, the government is paying Eric Jensen Greenhouses Ltd., $4,680.

Jensen employs two men to keep the $16,701 worth of plants watered and well for the year.

The dracaena reflexa, warnecki and massangaena, along with the ficus, schefflera and philodendrons, are used as dividers and decoration in the newly-renovated office building.

No Boom in Hansard Sales

Hansard, the service providing a record of all legislative debates and proceedings, apparently is not proving a ruanaway best-seller.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall filed answers to questions Wednesday showing there were 461 applications for subscriptions to Hansard up to Feb. 9, last Friday.

Estimated expenditure on the service in the next fiscal year is $135,000, including $105,430 for salaries.

business

Dominion

Dominion Stores Ltd. reports little change in profit in the first three quarters of the current fiscal year although sales increased 17 per cent of $814,723,000.

Net earnings for the 39 weeks to Dec. 16 were $6,091,000 or 73 cents a share compared with $5,827,000 and 72 cents in the corresponding period a year earlier.

Thomas McCormack, vice-chairman and chief executive officer, says in a report to shareholders the company will give complete co-operation to a parliamentary food price inquiry.

He adds: "Influences on the price of food are many and are widespread, not the least of which is the rise in wages, which have risen at a much greater rate than have food prices."

Peyto

Peyto Oils Ltd. lost $2,212 during the six months ended Nov. 30, 1972, compared with a profit of $29,265 in the same period a year earlier.

The company increased cash flow to $106,031 from $91,452 but made higher provisions for depreciation, depletion and well abandonments than in 1971. Gross revenue rose to $276,745 from $210,932.

Villacentres

Villacentres Ltd., a Calgary-based company which operates nursing homes throughout Canada, reports earnings of $705,301 or 35 cents a share for the year ended Dec. 31, 1972.

President Leon Libin said this compared to earnings in the previous year of $523,221 or 26 cents a share.

Cash flow from operations was $1,336,115 or 65 cents a share, up from $1,075,410 or 53 cents a share. Gross revenue was $5,947,761 compared with $3,613,012 in 1971.

At a board of directors meeting the company declared a quarterly dividend of three cents a share payable March 30, 1973 to all shareholders of record March 12, 1973.

IAC

IAC Ltd. reports net earnings of $21,994,000 or $1.65 a share for 1972 compared with $19,415,000 or $1.50 in 1971.

President K. H. MacDonald says in a report to shareholders that the improved report was partly because of new programs which resulted in reductions in charges for some financing and leasing services.

"While a narrowing of margins resulted, these programs assisted in the development of an unprecedented volume of business."

WCI Canada

WCI Canada Ltd., formerly Kelvinator of Canada Ltd., reports combined net income, including four companies purchased last September, for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30 of $4,487,412 compared with $769,581 in the previous year.

On a per-share basis this amounted to $2.85, including 79 cents in extraordinary items, up from 49 cents with 21 cents in extraordinary items in 1971.

WCI Canada acquired Franklin Manufacturing Co. Canada Ltd., Hupp Canada Ltd., Refrigeration Supplies Co. Ltd., and White Consolidated Industries Ltd.

Royal Trust

Royal Trust reports net earnings of $13.3 million or $2.73 a share for the year ended Dec. 31 compared with $10.1 million or $2.14 in 1971.

Total assets under administration at year end were $12.6 billion, up from $11.2 billion at the previous year end.

Net operating profit for 1972 was $12.5 million or $2.57 a share, excluding net gain of $825,000 on investment and disposal of premises.

In assets, the company reports consolidated balance sheet assets of $2.1 billion, up from $1.9 billion in 1971.

Estates, trusts and agency accounts totalled $10.5 billion compared with $9.3 billion the year previous.

C. Breweries

Canadian Breweries Ltd. reports net earnings of $3,161,000 or 9.5 cents a share for the six months ended Dec. 31 compared with $5,412,000 or 19.9 cents in 1971.

An extraordinary gain of $8.5 million or 18 cents a share was also recorded in 1972 from the sale of property in Toronto.

In a statement to shareholders, the company said earnings "reflect increased cost of production and the company may incur a net loss for the remaining six months of the fiscal year."

Rio Algom

Rio Algom Mines Ltd. reports net earnings for 1972 of $16,308,000 or $1.27 a share, up sharply from $9,698,000 and 73 cents in the previous year.

The company says 1972 earnings are after deducting $672,000, Rio Algom's share of the net loss incurred by Lornex Mining Corp. Ltd., from operations for the quarter ended Dec. 31.

Earnings from mining operations increased 50 per cent to $20,776,000 and from steel operations 61 per cent to $3,439,000.

Lornex

Lornex Mining Corp. Ltd. reports a net loss of $1,215,000 or 15 cents a share for the year ended Dec. 31, reflecting the end of the first three months of operations which ended on that date.

The company says progress has been slower than expected in its copper operations because of mechanical considerations.

Westburne

Westburne International Industires Ltd., has announced earnings of $3,099,000 or $1.92 a share for the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1972. Earnings during the period more than doubled the $1,460,000 or 48 cents a share recorded during the same period of 1971.

Gross revenue increased to $129,351,000 from $94,418,000. The increase was attributed to greatly expanded drilling resulting from the current North American energy crisis.

TAX TIPS

This information is supplied by the federal department of national revenue. If further details are required, contact the Victoria District Taxation Office between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at 388-3551. For those living outside the Victoria exchange area, ask the long-distance operator for Zenith 0-4000 and the call will be placed without charge.

Q. I am a self-employed fisherman operating my own boat without help. Can I declare my actual expenses to the buyer of my fish or must he use the 25 per cent assumed operating costs?

A. The 25 per cent assumed operating costs must be used. Unemployment insurance regulations require that this amount must be deducted regardless of the actual operating costs.

Q. How do you determine the earnings from which the fish buyer will establish the insurable earnings of a captain owner for purposes of calculating his unemployment insurance premiums?

A. The earnings of the fisherman who owns the boat and, or gear used in making the catch, and who is a member of the crew, is for any week considered to be the greater of

(1) Gross returns of the catch. Less (A) Amounts paid to other members of the crew; (B) 25 per cent of gross catch or: (2)) $50.00.

Q. I know this is a contradiction in terms, but in connection with deductions for unemployment insurance premiums who is the "designated employer" of a self-employed fisherman?

A. Any of the following persons under specific conditions could be the "designated employer" of a fisherman in the following order:

(A) Buyer; (B) Head fisherman of the crew; (C) Agent for selling the catch of the crew; (D) Common agent; (E) Member of crew.

In other words, in the case of a self-employed fisherman the first buyer or acquirer of the catch is the "designated employer" provided the catch is delivered in Canada in a "face to face" transaction by a member of the crew who made the catch.

Q. On occasion fish is bought from boats where boat expenses are not known until the boat returns to home port. How should we as the buyer handle this situation?

A. Generally, before you can determine the insurable earnings and the premium deduction required for members of a crew, the declaration made to you as the buyer must include boat expenses. The income tax department recognizes the problems created when the boat expenses are not available at the time the catch is sold and under these circumstances it is prepared to accept estimates of the boat expenses.

Q. My wife shares in the catch as a member of the crew. Can she be insured? I am also a crew member.

A. The wife of a fisherman is not insurable for a catch by a crew of which her husband is a member. The wife's share must be added to the husband's earnings for purposes of calculating his insurable earnings.

Q. How are the insurable earnings determined of a fisherman's helper who is paid on a share-of-the-catch basis?

A. The fisherman must declare to the buyer the share arrangement. The actual monies paid to the helper in accordance with the share arrangement is the amount on which a premium for unemployment insurance is required, subject to the minimum and maximum insurable earnings for the pay period. (I.E. weekly — $30 minimum, $150.00 maximum.)

Keep Cool And Follow The Blue

By C. DAVID WEYMAN
Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co.

The tax man cometh and the spectre of the April 30 deadline begins to haunt us.

But for our first experience of the new tax era we may find the tax man's appearance blurred and obscure and he will be dressed up in unfamiliar garb.

Those who used to file their tax teturn on the simple T1 short form will find that this year they must use the standard four-page form.

Though they can probably ignore most of the nine schedules attached to it.

Tax reform hits us all.

(First of a series)

When your personalized tax return arrives in the mail, your first impression will be that you are seeing double.

This is not an allergic reaction — it is just that every pave and schedule has a duplicate behind it for your file copy.

Perhaps the only fun thing about the tax return is taking your first trip through it and checking out the sequence of the schedules from one to nine.

Then pray that completing them all is the other guy's problem.

Its theme is—Keep your cool and follow the blue.

The tax department has done a fantastic job in preparing the 1972 tax return guide. Heed its advice and take the return one step at a time and you should certainly not have problems.

Read the first two pages of the guide carefully and then the four blue pages that follow and your confidence will begin to climb.

As the guide states, "chances are, the blue pages will be all you need."

So remember — follow the blue.

What's the 1972 tax return like then?

Its first page deals with the identification of the taxpayer and the actual tax calculation which is described this year as summary of tax and credits.

These two sections are the same as last year except for an extra line allowing a credit for any unemployment insurance overpayment.

And this year if you have a tax refund coming, make sure that you tear off the postal code sticker in the bottom right-hand corner of schedule 1 and place it in the postal code box on the mailing envelope provided.

This will re-direct your tax return and will ensure priority in processing it.

The second page contains the summary of income and deductions. This too is the same as last year with the addition of some new tax reform lines.

New animals in the income section are adult training allowances, net research grants and unemployment insurance benefits.

Those having the last of these—UIC benefits—will be receiving a new kind of T4 slip called a T4 Uand must include the amount shown in their income.

New deductions for 1972 include the employment expense deduction — maximum $150 — which can be claimed by almost all employees. An exception is employed commission salesmen who claim their expenses.

Also deductible for the first time are unemployment insurance premiums — which will be shown on the T4 slips you get — and child care expenses.

To claim the latter, you must complete schedule 5. Usually the working mother claims child care expenses but so can a father who in 1972 was single, a widower, divorced or separated, or if his wife was infirm.

Supporting receipts should not be sent with the tax return but must be retained for examination by the tax department on request.

And, of course, appearing in income and deductions for the first time are the dreaded taxable capital gains and deductible capital losses supported by the statement of capital dispositions in schedule 2. More of all of that in later articles.

On to page 3 of the tax return and a series of calculations.

First come overpayments of Canada pension plan contributions and unemployment insurance premiums.

Then, for the self-employed, comes the calculation of Canada pension plan contributions — maximum $176.40 for 1972.

Over to the last page and the claim for personal execmptions which is shorter than last year—the less common exemption claims are in schedule 6 if you need them.

Of the remaining schedules, most people will only be concerned with schedule 3— medical expenses and charitable donations — if they are not claiming the $100 optional standard deduction instead.

The detailed tax calculation in schedule 1 applies to those whose taxable income exceeds $12,000 or who have received dividends from taxable Canadian corporations or foreign income.

If this introductory tour of your new tax return has whetted your appetite and you can't wait to get your hannds on it — don't call the tax office . . . watch for the mailman.

Tax Adjustments Alta. Priority

EDMONTON (CP) — Municipal tax reform and restructured provincial-municipal financing are expected to receive major emphasis when the Alberta legislature's spring session opens today.

The Progressive Conservative government already has announced a proposed property tax reduction plan which it says will be of considerable help to hard-pressed municipalities.

The plan is to remove the 30-mill provincial levy for education from the property tax. This would give homeowners up to $216 off their property taxes this year, an increase of $141 over 1972 when the $75 homeowner grant was in effect.

Renters would receive an income tax credit of up to $100 a year on grounds they pay property taxes through their landlords.

Municipalities would have their hospital and local health unit costs paid and 90 per cent —up from 80 per cent—of their social assistance costs. Also, they would get $15 million in unconditional grants and those that didn't increase their 1973 budgets by more than 7½ per cent would share $20 million in incentive grants.

Also expected in the throne speech opening the session are new policies for provincial parks and the province's coal industry.

Energy as a whole likely will have a leading role in the debates. The government has demanded an increase in the price of natural gas exported from the province, while retaining a low price for Alberta users.

It will have to legislate a method for the two-price system.

The Conservatives have 49 seats in the 75-seat house. Social Credit has 24, the NDP one and there is one independent.

Dairy Boom Seen

REGINA (CP) — Dramatic international changes during the next few years will brighten prospects for Canada's dairy industry, Alex Hunt of Ottawa said Wednesday Hunt, of the federal industry trade and commerce department, told delegates to the Saskatchewan Dairy Association's annual meeting, that the United Kingdom's entry into the European Economic Community will leave New Zealand, Australia and Canada as the world's major exporters of dairy products.

Glasses Eyed

REGINA (CP) — The government is planning a study of the cost of eyeglasses in light of the rising cost of optical care, Health Minister Walter Smishek, speaking at a meeting of the Saskatchwan Optometric Association, said he questions the practice of professionals who make prof-scribe. professionals who make profits on the products they prescribe.

Unwanted Pay Hike

REGINA (CP) — Mayor Harry Walker had a $3,000 pay raise slipped by him at meeting of city council. The mayor then said he would consider refunding the pay raise back to the city after he had looked into all aspects of the increase.

Father Shot

CALGARY (CP) — A 15-year-old boy from nearby Langdon has been charged Tuesday with the attempted murder of his father. The father was shot twice in the chest by a .22-calibre rifle and is recovering in hospital. The youth has been remained for psychiatric examination.

Teachers Settle

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary public school teachers have settled for a 13-per-cent salary increase over two years. Under the new agreement, beginning teachers with four years university training will receive $8,700 annually in 1973 compared with $8,175 under the old contract. The same teacher would receive $9,275 if he started in 1974. Teachers with six years university training and 11 years experience would receive $16,000 annually this year or $17,950 in 1974. The new contract will cost the public school board about $50 million this year.

Hutterite Team

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government today named the members of a seven-man committee to act as a liaison in the often-troubled relations between Hutterites and their neighbors. The government is scheduled to repeal the controversal Communal Properties act March 1, restoring the Hutterites' rights to buy land without cabinet permission. However, Hutterite land purchases are to be discussed by the new committee which will attempt to reach a negotiated settlement on any differences between the Hutterites and other farmers or groups.

6,000 Voyageurs Expected

OTTAWA (CP) — About 6,000 young persons are expected to take part this summer in the Young Voyageurs Program.

The program, designed to allow the young to discover the country through direct observation and experience, is open to students from 15 to 17 years of age.

The students will be broken down into groups of 20 and spend about seven days with families from other provinces.

Since 1964, more than 35,000 young people have taken part in the program jointly financed by the federal and provincial governments.

U.S. Food Going Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food prices are expected to go up six per cent in the United States this year—the sharpest jump since 1951—the agriculture department said Tuesday. The increases follow a 4.3 per cent over-all rise in food prices in 1972.

Ali Blows a Forecast But Wins a Fight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (Reuter) — Former world heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali put on a dazzling boxing display to gain a unanimous decision over Britain's Joe Bugner here Wednesday night, but failed to score his predicted seventh-round knockout.

Bugner, 219 pounds and a shade taller than his opponent, at times looked like an innocent against the masterly Ali. But he kept going gamely despite having his face reduced to a mask of blood in the 10th round.

Ali, weighing 217¼, had predicted a knockout in the seventh round and when he failed to achieve it, he walked back to his corner on the bell, letting his gloves flop against his sides.

The fight, at the 7,200-seat domed Las Vegas Convention Centre, drew a crowd of 5,700 with a gate of $288,000 against a possible gross of more than $400,000.

The biggest tribute to the courage of the powerful curly-haired Bugner was that he was still on his feet at the end of the 12 rounds despite the savage battering he suffered in the 10th.

British judge Roland Dakin gave it 57-54 for Ali, Ralph Mosa gave it 57-52 and Lou Tabet made it 56-53.

Bugner, with a previous record of 43 wins, four losses and one draw, went into the fight an 8-to-1 underdog.

In the middle of the fight, and particularly in the fifth and sixth rounds, Ali appeared to be taking it easy, as if the jabbing punishment he was giving Bugner might put him ahead of his prediction.

But in the 10th round Ali opened up, smashing lefts and rights to Bugner's face which sent two streams of blood coursing from the side of his eye down to his chin. His jolting jabs sent blood spurting over Bugner's face.

Bugner's seconds managed to clean him up and he survived the last two rounds, although Ali kept working at the cut and making it bleed again.

Ali's purse for the fight was a $275,000 guarantee and Bugner, who never officially announced his purse, is believed to have been paid $125,000.

"If he keeps at it and keeps working, and when I have retired in a couple of years' time, he could easily be a contender for the world title," Ali said.

Bugner claimed after the fight that he did not get hurt, but said he was worried by the eye cut.

"I didn't realize that Ali's legs were as good as they were," he said.

Oil Kings Hit Road On Top

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Oil Kings closed a home series in style Wednesday night with a 6-2 win over Calgary Centennials that gave them a two-point edge atop the Western Canada Hockey League's West Division.

Oil Kings, about to embark on a road trip that calls for nine games in 11 days, spotted Centennials two goals then turned the tide. Medicine Hat Tigers are second in the division with 68 points.

Meanwhile, in the East Division, second-place Flin Flon Bombers defeated cellar-dwelling Winnipeg Jets 7-4 in Winnipeg, and Swift Current Broncos downed visiting Regina Pats 6-3.

Del Iannone set the pace for Bombers with three goals and Wayne Bianchin scored two.

Flin Flon's leading point-getter, winger Blaine Stoughton did not play because of illness but it cued Flin Flon manager-coach Patty Ginnell in levelling a "tampering" charge against the World Hockey Association.

Ginnell confirmed that Stoughton has been "approached" by Los Angeles Sharks but the winger "won't be talking to the Sharks or anyone else until after the National Hockey League amateur draft in June."

Ginnell added: "It's about time they (WHA) showed some class and told their scouts to leave the kids alone until after the season is finished."

Ginnell feels the scouts' contact has a disturbing effect on the players.

In Swift Current, Dave Williams and Kelly Pratt scored two goals each to lead the Broncos attack. Brent Ilott and David George also scored.

Bill Kriski, Broncos' starting goalie, was injured after stopping 20 shots and was replaced late in the second period by Henry Durkin.

At Edmonton, John Rogers scored the tying and winning goals and team-mate Terry McDonald also scored twice. The other Oil Kings goals were by Randy Smith and Larry Pashak.

Edmonton fired 44 shots at Calgary goalie John Davidson. Larry Hendricks of Oil Kings had an easier time with only 18 shots to handle. Edmonton doesn't play another home game for 28 days.

HANDS UP—Stretching for rebound during Wednesday night's Viking-Alaska basketball game at UVic are Bart LeBon (32) of Alaska, UVic's Pard Hogewiede (40, in dark jersey) and Alaska's Bill Coonce (54). Nanooks posted 97-72 win in wide open non-conference affair.

Improved Basketball New Call of the North

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

They've got more than igloos and Eskimos up in Alaska. This year, for example, they have a bumper crop of basketball players.

Nine of them showed up Wednesday night at UVic Gym wearing the uniforms of the University of Alaska Nanooks and showed about 400 fans the best college basketball they've seen here this winter.

Nanooks outgunned UVic Vikings 97-72 in the highest-scoring game of the year. Both teams played it wide open but there was never any doubt that the speedy Alaskans were in control. They led 45-32 at the half.

This is the seventh season that Alaska, a school of about 3,000 enrolment in Fairbanks, has played a full college schedule and Wednesday's win was the Nanooks' 15th of the season abainst six losses, all non-conference.

That matched the school's previous single-season victory total and coach Al Svenningson hopes to surpass that record this weekend in a pair of games against Simon Fraser Clansmen in Vancouver.

Although Alaska doesn't play in a conference (the nearest university is in Vancouver) Nanooks still are eligible for National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (small college) playoffs. But they must beat SFU, also an NAIA school, to qualify.

Alaska has had basketball for nearly half a century but major handicaps have been lack of in-state high school talent and travelling expenses.

Wednesday night's game was highlighted by exceedingly sharp shooting. Alaska fired a fine 54 per cent from the floor while Vikings were 49 per cent.

Bart Le Bon and Mike Lassley led the visitors with 20 points each, LeBon shooting 63 per cent. Dick Lee added 16 points on 58 per cent and Mark Beauchamp 15 on 70 per cent.

Tom Holmes counted 15 points for UVic on 50 per cent, Mike Bishop 13 points on 75 per cent, Jim Hunter 12 points on 63 per cent and Chris Hall 10 points on 57 per cent.

Shooting was the only department in which there was an appreciable difference as Vikings held a 47-46 edge in rebounds while Alaska was charged with 14 turnovers to Uvic's 16.

ALASKA (97) — Bob Clarke 12, Rick Weber 2, Bart LeBon 20, Mark Beauchamp 15, Sam Thornton 6, Dick Lee 16, Al Shoats 2, Mike Lassley 20, Bill Coonce 4.

VIKINGS (72) — Corky Jossul 8, Dave Tooby 2, Jim Hunter 12, Jim Dudoridge 6, Harry Hunter 2, Tom Holmes 15, Pard Hogewiede 4, Chris Hall 10, Mike Bishop 13.

Pocket Rocket Passes Brother

By The Canadian Press

Henri Richard surpassed a career milestone set by his famous brother, Maurice, when Montreal Canadiens handed New York a 6-3 setback Wednesday night to end the Rangers unbeaten National Hockey League streak at 16 games.

But the Pocket Rocket confided after contributing a goal and an assist that his 966 career points, which gives him a one-point edge on Maurice (Rocket) Richard, didn't cross his mind "until the papers started talking about it."

"Sure it's nice," he admitted, but suggested the Canadiens' six-point margin over the runner-up Rangers in the East Division race is not padding enough for the playoff run with 21 games to go.

"We still have to keep winning," said Richard. "If we lose one and they win one, then we are right back to where we were before tonight's game."

'KEY' VICTORY

And while the Canadiens were concerned about their stretch run for the Prince of Wales Trophy, Pittsburgh Penguins began a crucial five-game week by knocking over the visiting Vancouver Canucks 6-2.

"This week is the key to the rest of the season," Pittsburgh coach Ken Schinkel said in a post-game interview. "We've got five games in a week and we have to win at least four of them to get going," he added of the Penguins' playoff hopes in the West.

The Penguins, with 52 points, trail fourth-place St. Louis by six points after the Blues were dumped 5-2 by Minnesota North Stars.

In other games, Buffalo Sabres trimmed Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2 to move into a fourthplace tie in the East with Detroit after the Red Wings were held to a 2-2 tie by Los Angeles Kings, Chicago Black Hawks needed two third-period goals to defeat New York Islanders 4-2 and Atlanta Flames skated to a 3-3 tie with California Golden Seals at Oakland.

Richard, Yvan Cournoyer, Chuck Lefley, Bob Murdoch and Rejean Houle tallied for the Montrealers before the injury-plagued Rangers, who had put together three consecutive 6-0 victories before being held to a 2-2 standoff by Montreal last Sunday, could find the range.

VICKERS GETS 2

Then it was the only Ranger line still intact—Walt Tkaczuk, Steve Vickers and Bill Fairbairn—that could solve rookie goaltender Michel Plasse who improved his NHL mark to 9-1-3 while subbing for injured Ken Dryden.

The Penguins got goals from six different players while firing 40 shots at Vancouver goaltender Dunc Wilson.

"We know what we're up against," said Schinkel, a 40-year-old winger with the Penguins until he hung up his skates Jan. 13 to replace fired Red Kelly.

The Penguins have dropped from fifth to seventh under Schinkel, but several of their losses were against established clubs—three to Montreal.

"We've been winning at home, and we'll be playing mostly teams from our division, teams of our calibre, the rest of the way."

Blazers Laud Quebec Win

By The Canadian Press

Bob Charlebois' two late goals at Quebec City got as much response in Philadelphia as did the two by Danny Lawson, whose recent scoring heroics have lifted the Blazers into World Hockey Association playoff contention.

Charlebois' goals helped Ottawa Nationals to a 6-3 win over Quebec and coupled with a 6-5 Philadelphia upset of Cleveland Crusaders moved the Blazers into a fourth-place tie with Les Nordiques in the Eastern Division.

It is the highest placing of the year for Philadelphia, which spent the early months of the season deep in the division cellar.

Lawson, who had scored four goals the previous night, padded his league-leading goals total to 48 with two third-period scores.

WEEKEND SKI REPORT

Green Mountain reports about two inches of fresh snow atop a 61-inch top base and an 87-inch top base. The road appears to be in better over-all condition than last season.

Forbidden Plateau had a temperature of 34 degrees and cloudy skies this morning. There are three inches of new snow and the base averages 73 inches. Chains must be carried.

Other Pacific Northwest reports:

GROUSE MOUNTAIN: Overcast, 31 degrees, four inches new snow, operating all facilities 9 a.m. to midnight.

WHISTLER MOUNTAIN: Overcast, 26 degrees, one inch new snow, 114-inch top and 82-inch mid-station total, all facilities except Red Chair operating 9 a.m. top 3 p.m.

HEMLOCK VALLEY: Snowing lightly, 30 degrees, three inches new snow, all facilities operating 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

MT. SEYMOUR: Overcast, 35 degrees, all facilities operating 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.

MT. BAKER: Snowing, 30 degrees, four inches new snow, 129-inch total, operating Friday through Tuesday.

Mt. Newton Captures Junior Title

Mt. Newton overcame some fine tackling by defending-champion Quamichan to post a 7-0 victory and collect the Vancouver Island junior high school rugby crown in a final Wednesday.

Quamichan has held the title for the past two years.

250 Swimmers In Title Splash

Approximately 250 swimmers will be competing from four area clubs in the two-day Victoria and District championships getting under way Saturday at Colwood's Centennial Pool.

Juan de Fuca Cohoes are the defending champions and other entries will be coming from Victoria Olympians, Victoria Flying "Y" and Saanich Swim Club.

Competition will include both individual and team age-class events as well as senior races.

Events start at 1:30 p.m. Saturday and resume at 8:30 a.m. Sunday.

Admission is 25 cents for adults each day and children under 12 will be admitted free.

Brice Advances

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — The Bill Stack rink of Vancouver won the "A" event in the British Columbia firefighters bonspiel at the Prince George Curling Club and the Les Brice foursome of Victoria took the "B" event final in the 52-rink playoff after three consecutive wins Wednesday.

Both rinks advanced to the championship round which got underway today. The other semi-final playoff game in the round is between Aubrey Neff of Vancouver and Keith Stamp of Williams Lake.

Weekend Binge in Basketball

If basketball is your game, you're going to love it this weekend.

Six Victoria teams are in action in major events around the city, four of them in playoffs and two more in schedule windups.

The first shots will be fired Friday night at 7:30 when University of Victoria Vikettes meet Calgary Dinnies in the first of a weekend doubleheader that concludes Vikettes' Canada West University Athletic Association women's schedule. The teams meet again Saturday at 7:30, both games at UVic Gym.

Vikettes have a 13-3 won-lost record in conference play and are third in the six-team CWUAA standings while Calgary is last with one win in 16 starts.

UVic Vikings also conclude their Canada West men's schedule Friday and Saturday with games against Calgary Dinosaurs at UVic Gym starting at 9:30 both nights. Victoria is 6-10 in league play and Calgary is 6-12, so the series could decide fourth place in the standings.

The playoff action begins Saturday at 8 p.m. at Central Junior High School where UVic Jayvees take on London Boxing Club in the first of a best-of-three final for the Vancouver Island junior men's championship. Second game is 2 p.m. Sunday at UVic Gym.

If a third is necessary, the teams will toss for home venue and the game is expected to take place next Tuesday or Wednesday.

At stake is a berth in the Canadian junior men's finals slated for Victoria in March.

Central Junior High will be the scene of more playoff action Sunday when First United Saints of Victoria meet Vancouver Marlins in a 1 p.m. encounter that opens a best-of-three B.C. junior women's final. The balance of the series is scheduled the following weekend in Vancouver.

Sunday's junior women's game will be followed by the opener of a best-of-three series for the provincial senior "A" men's crown between Victoria Scorpions and Surrey Broncos, champions of the Vancouver Dogwood Basketball Association, who are heavily augmented by other players from the league. That one starts at 3 p.m. with the rest of the series also scheduled the following weekend in Vancouver.

Alberni Valley Steelhead Available in All Months

It has been many years since I first saw the Alberni Valley. The April day was bright and well-appreciated by those who had weathered a rainy West Coast winter.

I visited a local sporting goods store just as one of the resident fish hawks arrived with two magnificent steelhead taken from the Stamp River.

It was truly a day for major decisions.

But with my wife-to-be occupied as only brides can be on their wedding day — and with the wedding still a few hours away — mid-afternoon saw me drifting a sedge fly at the tail end of Money's Pool on the Stamp. Suffice to say that my wife did not have to wait at the altar (too long), and while I took not a single fish — the day, the stream and the sport have proven to be a perpetual lure.

Since that fateful year, I have had many many exhilarating days angling in what I feel is one of the fishiest valleys on Vancouver Island. Unlike other regions of the Island, the Alberni Valley has a wide choice of productive year-round stream angling areas.

There is not usually a single day when one river or apother flowing into Alberni Inlet doesn't have a run of steelhead readily available to the angler.

The best streams to try each month:

● January, February, March, April: Winter steelheading in all streams. Be sure to try the smaller creeks like Rogers, Kitsuksis, Cous, China, Coleman and Carnation, immediately following high water periods.

● May and June: Sarita, Taylor and Ash rivers for early summer runs.

● July: Fish the Stamp during this, probably the least successful month for steelhead fishing.

● August, September, October: Good summer run steelheading in the Stamp, the Taylor, the Nitinat, the Sarita and the Nahmint rivers.

● November: Good early runs of winter steelhead in Cous Creek. Try a boat trip down the upper Stamp from Roberts Lake to Money's Pool for late summer runs.

● December: Cous Creek and the Somass for winter steelhead.

The more popular streams of the area include the Somass, Sproat, Stamp, Taylor and Ash river systems at the head of the Inlet. Down the west side of the Inlet lie little-known or fished Cous Creek and the Nahmint River. Along the east side of the Inlet lie a number of smaller streams such as China Creek, Franklin River, Coleman Creek, Carnation Creek, Sarita River and Pachena River.

The streams at the head of the Inlet are all accessable at any time and generally from short side roads off the main highway or from Beaver Creek road. Down the Inlet, logging roads provide the only access and this is restricted to weekends only. However, MacMillan Bloedel officials have informed me that they are planning a new recreational access policy with an aim to opening their company roads in the Ash River valley for mid-week access.

An absolute must for any angler travelling in the valley are company access road maps. These are available either at company offices in Port Alberni or directly from MacMillan Bloedel offices at 1075 West Georgia St., Vancouver 5, B.C. Recreational guide maps to request are: Franklin River Division, Sproat River Division and Cameron Division. I would also recommend the government topographical map of the central portion of the Island titled, "Alberni, B.C. — Sheet 92F."

BOWLER OF WEEK

Strong opening game of 342 carried Val Courneyea to top of women's fivepin section in 17th week of Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Val rolled 342-206-254—802 series in Friday Nighters' League at Cush's Bowl-a-Golf Spa.

Titans, Spartans Prevail

Claremont Spartans and Victoria Titans each scored a victory Wednesday to remain deadlocked for the Victoria High School Rugby League lead.

Spartans posted a 12-6 win over host Reynolds Roadrunners while Titans blanked visiting Mt. Douglas Mountainmen, 10-0.

In the other match played Wednesday, Oak Bays defeated host Mount View Hornets, 17-9.

Chris Neal and Bruce Graham scored ties for Spartans while Tom Elwell kicked both conversions. After Spartans took a 6-0 half-time lead, Barry Scroggs scored a try for Reynolds which was converted by Bill Beischer.

Dave Reed, Ian Benson and Kevin Neish scored tries and Don Carson kicked one conversion and a penalty goal for Bays. Jamey Murray scored a try to pace Hornets and Ed Murray booted the conversion.

McCormick May Help Solve Belkin's Worry

CALGARY — Don McCormick, a former Victorian now playing out of Vancouver, has been named to Canada's Davis Cup tennis team but stumbled a little during the Canadian indoor championships here Wednesday.

Paul Gerkin of Stanford, Conn., trounced McCormick 6-1, 6-1 in the second round. Dave Brown of Toronto, another member of the team recently announced by the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, dropped a 6-2, 6-2 decision to Jan Kukal of Czechoslovakia.

Brown and McCormick also suffered a setback in doubles play, but the Canadian pairing drew applause for their performance.

Although beaten 6-4, 6-2 by Karl Meiler of West Germany and Tito Vasquez of Argentina in a first-round match, Brown and McCormick played well enough to solve — or pose — a problem for Davis Cup selectors.

"We won the Canadian closed championship at Winnipeg last year," McCormick said. "We're the reigning Canadian champions."

The performance of Brown and McCormick, who produced flashes of brilliance, reminded observers that playing-captain Belkin has said many times Canada's major Davis Cup requirement is a solid doubles team.

Belkin would prefer not to play doubles if possibe in the meet at Colombia, starting Feb. 23, and trials will be held to determine the fate of McCormick and Brown, both newcomers to the Davis Cup team. Belkin and Bardsley are virtually certain to play all important singles matches.

However, neither of the newcomers played well Wednesday in their singles matches.

However, Ilie Nastase of Romania justified his ranking as No. 1 seed by overpowering Jas Singh of India 7-5, 6-4. Second-seeded Juan Gisbert of Spain blasted Hungary's Saboles Baranyi 6-4, 6-2.

Crowds continued to be small for the $15,000 international event as only about 500 watched Wednesday. But organizers said sell-outs of about 2,000 are assured for semi-final and final matches Saturday and Sunday.

City Quintet Takes Title

Trevor Johnstone, Martin Block, Don Burnell, Brett Elworthy and Randy Larsen captured the Youth Bowling Council zone bantam team championship on home fivepin alleys at Town and Country Lanes.

Injuries Decimate Toronto Meeting

TORONTO — Ove Bengston, a towering, unseeded Swede, supplied the major upset in the $50,000 Toronto International tennis tournament Wednesday by surprising fourth-ranked Colin Dibley of Australia 7-5, 6-2.

Another seeded player, Bob Lutz, ranked seventh, was forced to withdraw when he injured his knee in a match against unseeded Aussie Allan Stone. Second-seeded Roy Emerson moved into the quarter-finals by sidelining fellow Australian Phil Dent 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 and fifth-ranked Stan Smith of the U.S. eliminated Harold Solomon of Maryland 6-4, 6-3.

In doubles, the top-seeded Emerson and Rod Laver became the first team to reach the semi-finals of a draw decimated by injuries by beating Bob Maud of South Africa and Andrew Pattison of Rhodesia 6-3, 6-3.

In addition to Lutz, Charlie Pasarell of Puerto Rico, Frank Froehling of Florida and New Zealand's Onny Parun have been sidelined because of injuries.

In addition, tour regulars Bob Hewitt and Cliff Drysdale, both of South Africa, skipped the tournament because of injuries.

Today's second-round pairings will put third-seeded Dick Stockton of San Antonio, Texas, against Jim McManus of Berkeley, Calif.; top-seeded Laver meets Frew McMillan of South Africa; sixth-seeded John Alexander of Australia plays Jaimie Fillol of Chile, and eighth-seeded Cliff Richey of San Angelo, Texas, plays 11th-seeded Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia.

Marg Continues To Provide Spark

As goes Marg Mainwaring, so goes Oak Bay . . .

And, generally, that's very well, thank you.

Ranked as one of the top players in British Columbia high school circles, the Oak Bay centre again provided the spark Wednesday as the Bays defeated Reynolds 49-32 to move to within two points of the Victoria Senior High School Girls' Basketball League lead.

Miss Mainwaring's latest contribution, 23 points, boosted her invididual total to 99 in the last five games.

Terri Rogers added 10 points to Oak Bay's total while Shirley Skaarup topped Reynolds with 12.

Victory moved the Bays to within two points of defending champion Mt. Douglas and Belmont but Oak Bay has games in hand over both co-leaders.

In the only other game played Wednesday, Gail Gummer dropped in the winning basket with less than three minutes to play as Mount View edged Victoria High Tigers 25-24.

Miss Gummer topped the Views with 10 points to share high scorer's honors with Tigers' Cathy Flynn.

Another Helper

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Walt Michaels has been named defensive coach of Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League. The appointment of Michaels, 43, New York Jets' linebacker coach for the last 10 seasons, brings to four the number of assistants hired by Mike McCormack, names Eagles head coach late last month.

South Africans Setting Hot Pace

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — South Africans Alan Henning and John Bland shot five-under-par 67s to lead the field after the first round of the $12,000 Corlett golf tournament Wednesday.

Three more South Africans — Dale Hayes, John Fourie and Gary Baleson — were one shot behind the leaders.

THORBURN LOSES SNOOKER TITLE

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Werbeniuk of Vancouver dethroned Cliff Thorburn of Victoria as North American snooker champion Wednesday night, winning five of their six games to close out the series by 26 games to 22.

Deadlocked 21-21 at the start of the night's play, Werbeniuk won the first three games, scoring a break of 70 in the third, and conceded the fourth to the champion before clinching the series with two more victories.

Despite his defeat, Thorburn will compete in the world championship in Manchester, England, opening April 15, and tournament officials said he will meet Werbeniuk again next year in an attempt to regain his title.

Gary Player Faces Surgery

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Gary Player may undergo another operation to correct a kidney ailment discovered during exploratory surgery Tuesday.

The professional golfer, a frequent competitor on the United States tour, entered hospital for removal of a cyst from his left leg and a routine bladder examination. It was then, said his wife, Vivienne, that the kidney disorder was found.

"I don't know what the trouble is," she said. "The doctors still are considering the condition of his kidney, but it looks as though Gary will need another operation and that means he will be here longer than we thought."

Player had hoped to be dismissed from hospital Saturday and join the U.S. golf circuit next month.

'Humiliated' Argo Star Ready to Quit

TORONTO (CP) — Marv Luster, an all-Canadian in five of his nine Canadian Football League season with Toronto, wants to leave the Argos because of new head coach John Rauch.

Luster says he was "humiliated" by Rauch last week and is willing to give up his teaching position to play elsewhere in Canada.

"I changed my mind about retiring this season and went to talk to Rauch," Luster said in an interview. "He told me I could expect to be cut."

He said Rauch "had the gumption to suggest I get myself into shape for training camp."

"When I was cut, it would be released to the public that I had 'retired' voluntarily. He implied he might need my help coaching the defensive backfield and there would be a couple of bucks in that for me. I regard that offer as absurd.

"I left the office completely humiliated. It would be ludicrous to trdy out for a job that was not there."

Rauch appointed head coach in January to succeed fired Leo Cahill, was not available for comment.

John Barrow, Argo general manager, said he was shocked by Luster's reaction to the conversation with Rauch.

"I know that Rauch wants Marv to play, but if it doesn't work out that way we would make every effort to open up a coaching job for him," said Barrow.

"Knowing both men I'm shocked at the situation. The only plausible answer is that there was a communication problem because there's no other reason for it."

Tough Test For Vikings In Hockey

One of these days University of Victoria Vikings will put it all together in hockey, but whether they can do it this Sunday at Memorial Arena against Alberta Golden Bears is questionable.

Alberta, first in the Canada West University Athletic Association hockey standings going into last weekend's doubleheaders against Calgary Dinosaurs, dropped both games and fell into second place, two points behind Dinos.

So you can be sure Bears will be out to make ammends against Vikings, who are winless in 21 league starts this season and haven't won a conference game since January of 1971.

Game time is 4:30 p.m.

'BARROOM MURDERERS SHOULD BE HUNG'

LONDON (AP) — Some of Britain's pub keepers want the government to bring back the death penalty for barroom murderers and corporal punishment for violent customers.

Leading the campaign is Dom McKenna, 44, a tavern keeper who was attacked by a customer at his bar, the Nightingale, by a customer with a bottle. McKenna said he needed 10 stitches to mend a head wound.

"That person was fined £30 for the assault and £20 for possessing a knife," McKenna said.

The fines are the equivalent of $72 and $24.

"It is almost unbelievable that such an attack can take place and the attacker get off with such a light penalty," McKenna said.

As chairman of his local tavern keepers' association, he has appealed to the National Federation of Licensed Victualers' Associations in calling for hanging for barroom murders and for violent customers to be punished with the birch.

Capital punishment for murder was abolished in Britain in 1965.

$22.5 Million Hospital Bylaw Must Be Vague: Board

Concern over a $22.5 million hospital building referendum on March 21 was expressed Wednesday by members of the Capital Regional Hospital District Board.

Members sought, but didn't agree on, a way to make the referendum more palatable to voters, so it won't be defeated.

"I think it's going to be hard to sell," said Victoria Ald. Tom Christie.

He suggested the referendum explain how much of the $22.5 million will be paid by the provincial government and how much by residents.

"The $22.5 million scares a lot of people," Christie said.

Board chairman Art Young explained that the provincial government may pay up to 60 per cent of the $22.5 million, depending on which of three cost-sharing agreements applies to the expenditure.

However, said Young, the board cannot definitely state now how much of the tab the provincial government is likely to pick up.

"In the health field things happen so rapidly that we have to leave ourselves room to manoeuvre," Young said in explaining why there are no specific details in the referendum wording.

The $22.5 million will cover capital hospital spending over the next four to seven years, he said.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford warned against earmarking the funds for specific projects beforehand, and she stressed the urgency of passing the referendum.

"This is absolutely essential unless people are prepared to go to Vancouver for their hospital services in the next few years," she said.

Capital Regional Board executive director Dennis Young said the total figure was determined not by needs of the region, but by the limitation on the amount the provincial government was willing to share in.

To bring the region's hospitals up to standards would cost closer to $40 million, he said.

The board gave third reading to the bylaw.

Executive director Young was appointed returning officer for the referendum.

Gravel Land Freeze Sought Within Region

Gravel pits found a champion in Dick Emery at a meeting Wednesday of the Capital Regional District's local planning and zoning committee.

"We've got a freeze on farmland. Why can't we have a freeze on gravel-bearing land?" Emery, representative for Colwood, asked the committee.

Every suggested that land containing good gravel be preserved as a resource rather than subdividing for housing.

Committee chairman Mark Holmes of Salt Spring Island admitted it was a new idea to him.

"Often we hear it the other way around," he said. "All my feedback is about desecration of landscapes" caused by gravel pits.

WHERE IS IT?

"The first step is to know where the gravel is," said Tony Roberts, the district's planning director.

That is under study at the moment in the regional plan, he said.

No action was taken.

Both the planning and zoning committee and the local works and services committee discussed the problem of flooding in residential areas of View Royal, but neither came up with a solution.

The flooding occurred in December in the area of Marler Drive and prompted a letter from one flood victim, P. D. Simpson of 111 Marler, to the regional board.

Simpson's letter said that since the flooding two more lots in the area, both of which were under water on Dec. 26, have been sold.

The local works and services committee is looking for a way both to prohibit building on lots subject to flooding, and the prevention of subdivision into lots of areas subject to flooding.

"We don't have a solid piece of paper that says, you can't build there because it floods there," assistant engineer Steve Norman told the committee.

Norman is to report to the next committee meeting on ways this can be done.

The original engineer's report made of the Marler Drive area in 1969 approved it for subdivision, Norman said.

Questions of surface drainage and flooding in the area weren't "properly considered," by the report he said.

Dynamite Found At Fire

SEATTLE (AP) — Discovery of three bundles containing 57 sticks of dynamite at the scene of a house fire triggered the evacuation of an elementary school and several homes Wednesday, fire officials said.

The dynamite was found in a backpack on the second floor of a two-storey house in the Ballard section of the city, authorities said. One bundle contained an unattached timer, they said.

The Seattle police demolition squad, called to the residential neighborhood by firemen, removed the dynamite after determining it was not set to explode. The evacuation, which fire authorities estimated lasted 45 minutes, ended once the dynamite was removed.

Fire chief Jack Richards said firemen responding to a call from a neighbor who had seen smoke rising from the house extinguished a davenport fire. The dynamite was found when firemen went to the second floor in search of occupants or more fire, Richards said.

The occupants of the house, so far unidentified, apparently had left the premises about a half hour before the fire was discovered about 7 a.m., he said.

SHE'S JUST A LOVER

DETROIT (AP) — Heather Feather—all 389 pounds of her—is a lady wrestler who pummels her opponents every Saturday night but says: "I'm really a lover. I wouldn't hurt you."

Heather, whose real name is Peggy Jones, has been wrestling eight months and her manager, Lou Klein, says she has won 90 per cent of her bouts.

The hefty, 5-foot-10 brunette says her size never bothered her.

"I've always been like this," she said, adding that she has two sisters who outweigh her by 20 and 40 pounds, respectively.

She says she stays "in shape" by eating pizza with "cheese and sausage—I don't like anchovies. I'm always eating pizza."

Klein first met Heather when she was working at a suburban Allen Park bowling alley. He asked her to come to his gym and after four months of training "to learn the holds," he declared her ready for the ring.

Heather, who Klein bills as the largest woman wrestler on the exhibition wrestling circuit, says she "was terrified" when she first stepped into the ring with a lollypop in her hand and a bright yellow ribbon in her hair.

"It was an eight-woman battle royal"—a match where eight women get together in the ring and have a free-for-all.

"And," she recalls, "I thought they were going to kill me.

"I was the first guy out. They picked me up and threw me over the ropes . . . I landed on a guy in the first row. Was he surprised!"

Heather . . . the feather

Heather, who says she once wanted to be an art teacher and has dabbled in oils and chalk, now is waiting for her divorce to become final.

Reflecting on her two years of marriage, Heather says: "I wish I knew some wrestling then."

Stripper Suit a Bust

TORONTO (CP) — A stripper who was cut two years ago by a soft-drink can ring thrown from the audience of a downtown burlesque theatre has been refused an award from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board.

Christine Leonard, 31, told the board last fall that the small cut on her breast led to a series of operations and finally to removal of silicone padding which had been implanted to enlarge and uplift her breasts.

The board decided, however, that the surgey was due to failure of the implant and not because of the slight injury from the projectile.

Peru Joins Talks

LIMA, Peru (Reuter) — Venezuela Tuesday became the sixth nation to join the Andean Pact, the Latin American economic grouping sometimes called the Andean Common Market. Presidents Rafael Caldera of Venezuela and Juan Velasco Alvarado of Peru attended the ceremonial signing at pact headquarters here.

The Owl That Lived in a Freezer

UMPQUA, Ore. (AP) — A veterinarian says he doesn't know how it could happen, but Mr. and Mrs. Mark Vanderhoof and their son, Russ, all say there's no doubt that it happened.

Mrs. Vanderhoof accidentally hit an owl with her car while driving near her home Dec. 26.

"He didn't move, his feathers were all torn, and we were sure he was dead," she said.

The family wrapped the bird in a paper bag and put it in a freezer, which had some food in it and was being kept just above zero. They had decided to take it to a taxidermist on their next trip to nearby Roseburg.

Russ went to the freezer Jan. 6 for food and, out of curiosity, peeped into the bag.

The owl's one good eye was open, peering back, and its beak was clicking, Russ said.

The owl was taken out of the freezer, fed hamburger from a toothpick and water from an eyedropper until it was able to eat small rodents that the family trapped for it daily.

"Owls, like most small birds, require high caloric intake to maintain body temperatures at 106-110 degrees," said Tom Follis, zoo keeper at a nearby wildlife preserve, after examining the bird recently.

"It is utterly amazing that a small owl could withstand freezing temperatures for two weeks without food," the veterinarian said.

PM Vows Action on Yukon Indian Issues

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A delegation of Indian chiefs from the Yukon came here Wednesday with a long list of demands for land, cash and tax concessions to make Indians full partners in the development of the Territory.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who received their demands in person in an historic meeting, didn't of course, agree to any of the land or cash settlements they sought.

But he did agree to set up a committee to negotiate with the Yukon Native Brotherhood once its proposals have been studied.

And he welcomed the approach of the Yukon Indians as a contrast to the tactics taken by other Indian groups — presumably he was referring to the Nishga Nation and B.C. Native Brotherhood — trying to settle their land claims and aboriginal rights.

"This is a very constructive approach," he told the delegation in a committee room decorated with Indian designs.

"The whole accent you are putting on the future rather than the past is one which is very close to the government's desire," he added.

"You have been patient for 100 years. I hope you don't mind being patient for a few more weeks," the prime minister said.

He recalled that he has already told Parliament that his government in two or three months will make a statement on its Indian policy, updating the 1969 White Paper on the basis of later native claims and this month's Supreme Court of Canada decision on the Nishga case.

The court split on the question of whether the Nishgas have rights in northwestern B.C. and the prime minister stated later that it appears non-treaty Indians have legal rights which were not recognized in 1969.

But although the Yukon Indian demands were presented in an atmosphere of conciliation rather than of confrontation, they are substantial.

A position paper brought to Ottawa by the Indians stated that the cornerstone of the settlement they seek is land. But money is also necessary to develop a sound economic base for the Indian people, it added.

Land, "to be selected by the Indian people" would be held by the Crown in perpetuity for the use of present and future generations. The land would be designated as burial grounds and cemeteries, historical village sites, Indian municipalities, economic development areas, and trapping, hunting and fishing cabin sites.

Income tax would be forgiven for 25 years for earnings on these lands by Indians living on them.

Ottawa would continue to pay all health service and medicare costs for eligible Indians for 25 years.

An eligible Indian under the proposed settlement would have to trace ancestry to an Indian resident in the Yukon before Jan. 1, 1941, and would be at least 25 per cent of Indian blood.

Leases of Indian lands to non-Indians would be for no more than 25 years.

A temporary freeze on all unalienated Crown land would allow time for selection of Indian lands and their transfer to the Yukon Indian people.

All legal and survey costs of land selection would be paid for by Ottawa.

Indians would have control of waters within selected lands, and compensation would be paid for any damage to these waters.

Although the Indians don't claim Herschel Island or lands drained by streams running into the Arctic Ocean—traditionally Eskimo land—the Indians would sue Ottawa for any damage to the caribou in these areas.

The Indians would get 15 per cent of all federal and territorial revenue from hunting in the Yukon.

A percentage of the gross value of all gas, oil, mineral and forest production in the Territory would be paid to the Yukon Indians.

Finally, the federal government would pay to the Indians an unspecified cash settlement over 40 years with annual interest to compensate for losses suffered in the past.

Chief Elijoh Smith, president of the Brotherhood, noted that this was the first time leaders of the Yukon Indian people had come to "the capital of Canada."

Chief Smith said that Indians in the Yukon have been told that they share in the benefits of northern development.

"But we must be a partner in that development and not just get a job cutting a right-of-way for roads," he told Trudeau.

"We are not here looking for handouts," he added.

MOBILE MEAL PRICES RISE

Prices of meals-on-wheels to shut-ins will jump 15 cents on March 1, to 75 cents per meal.

The hike was announced jointly by Mrs. Pauline Barker, Silver Threads co-ordinator for the service, and Alec Reid, spokesman for Goodwill Enterprises for the Handicapped.

"We are regretful that spiralling food prices have forced us to take this step," Reid said.

It now costs Goodwill more than $1 to prepare tnd package each meal, which is delivered by volunteers, he said. The service is subsidized by the municipalities at 25-cents-a-meal.

The price hike, the first in three years, will raise monthly rates for the meal service from the current $12 to $15 a month.

Ford Brakes Faulty

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has announced it is recalling about 82,000 standard-sized 1973-model automobiles in Canada and the United States to check for possible faultily-placed brake lines.

A spokesman said Wednesday the front brake lines of some of the recalled vehicles may have been placed too close to the fender aprons. The insufficient clearance, he said, could permit the aprons to chafe the brake lines and wear them out, causing loss of front wheel braking and greatly increasing stopping distances.

The spokesman estimated 25 per cent of the cars could require replacement of either or both of the front brake lines. Ford will pay for inspection and any replacement needed, he said.

No accidents or injuries have been reported because of the defect, the spokesman added.

Included in the recall were 76,340 units sold in the United States, 5,440 in Canada and 660 in Ford's export market.

UVic May Offer Child Care Course

A four-year child care course won approval from the senate of the University of Victoria Wednesday evening.

Students will be admitted to the program this September if the board of governors approves the program and money can be found for it. A committee will be established to search for a director.

Until a director is found, a three-man committee should administer the program, the senate said.

Plans for the child care program, which is expected to attract about 100 students for the four years, were clouded by the acute financial sitiation the university is facing.

University president Dr. Hugh Farquhar put it bluntly: "It must be clearly understood that there are no funds for a director without taking it from something else."

"To me the next move is to investigate funding," Farquhar said.

Dr. John Dewey, who is chairman of a committee that began investigating the program last September, said the committee had "considerable encouragement" from the provincial government on the program. He held out a hope the government might help finance the program.

A director's salary will be the major cost of the program, Dewey said, other than some secretarial assistance. Projected cost will be around $30,000 to $50,000, he said.

All the courses for the program, except for one fourth year seminar, are already offered at the university.

Students will be required to do practical work in the summers in child care centres, which will be considered in awarding of diplomas.

Dewey predicted the program will attract a large number of students, and said there have already been many inquiries about it. The program will be unique in western Canada, he said.

Senate avoided the question of whether to have the program administered by the faculty of arts and science or the faculty of education by recommending it be administered by the Dean of Academic Affairs for up to two years.

Students will be able to specialize in diagnosis and treatment of children who suffer mental retardation, child psychosis, learning disorders and other programs. Graduates will receive a BA plus a Child Care Diploma.

After approving the program, senate took a look at other new schools which it had approved as long ago as 1967—nursing, social welfare, and law — and had yet to materialize.

A committee representing UVic, the provincial government and the provincial bar association is already examining the possibility of a law school.

Senate directed Dean of Academic Affairs Dr. D. J. MacLaurin to form committees of both academics and consultants in the field to examine the current status of the other two schools. The committees are to report back no later than September.

Chances of all the new programs may be affected by the university's financial situation.

In his remarks to senate, Farquhar described the "very critical situation" UVic faces, and warned the senators to "be prepared for a rather difficult time."

Farquhar is expecting a gap of about $800,000 between the university's operating budget for 1973-4 and the allocation it will receive from the provincial government.

A total of $100 million has been allocated for the coming year for operating expenses of the three universities.

UVic's exact share isn't known yet, but because UVic's student enrolment is dropping while Simon Fraser's is rising and University of British Columbia's is holding steady, UVic can expect less than six per cent of the allocation, Farquhar said.

"We have to find the $800,000 some way," he said, and warned that departments will probably be getting their budgets back for some cutbacks.

But the solution to UVic's problems is to "move ahead, not play dead," Farquhar said .The university needs new programs to halt its declining student enrolment.

He promised the university would go ahead with new programs if at all possible, and said he was hopeful of getting special funding for the proposed school of public administration.

"I don't want to preside over a wake at the university," Farquhar said.

Ottawa Gutless: Fisherman

West Coast fishermen Tuesday accused the Canadian government of being "gutless" for extending and expanding a bilateral fisheries agreement with Russia.

"The agreement shows how weak our government is," said Gerald Clarke, a spokesman for fishermen in the Tofino-Ucluelet area on the west coast of Vancouver island.

The agreement, effective Feb. 19, still allows Soviet fleets to operate within the 12-mile limit of the Queen Charlotte Islands.

In exchange, the Russian fleet gives up the right to fish the Big Bank area off the west coast of Vancouver Island. That is they can't fish within the 12-mile limit.

It also provides for Soviet co-operation with Canadian scientists in assessing fish stock off the west coast. In exchange for this, Soviet scientific vessels would have access to facilities at the ports of Prince Rupert, Vancouver and Nanaimo.

"Canadian fishermen operate off the coast of the Queen Charlotte Islands," Clarke noted. "Would the Soviets give Canadian fishermen the right to fish within the 12-mile limit off their coasts?"

"If an agreement like this is signed with Russia, what is to prevent other countries requesting the Canadian government for similar agreements," he added. "Korea today has a large dragger fleet. it too may want to fish off the Queen Charlottes."

He pointed out that Peru has extended its fishing rights to 200 miles off the country's coast.

"They don't allow foreigners to fish within this limit," he said.

Clarke also noted that all American states, except Washington, have barred Canadians from fishing within the 12-mile limit.

"But we permit the Americans to fish within our three-mile limit," he said. "If this doesn't reflect a weak government, I would like to know what does."

Papal Play in Anglican Church

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

Frederick William Rolfe was an angry little man.

His anger and discontent with the Roman Catholic church is expertly portrayed by John Heath in Peter Luke's Hadrian the Seventh which opened at Christ Church Cathedral Wednesday night.

Produced by special arrangement with Samuel French Ltd., the play runs until Saturday night. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

An autobiographical novel written by Rolfe in the late 19th century, considered by critics as a minor masterpiece, is the basis for the play foreshadowing many of the changes in the Catholic church during that period.

NOT SHARED

Rolfe lived under the conviction that he had a vocation for the priesthood but his beliefs were not shared by the church.

After the death of the pope at the turn of the century, Rolfe creates a fantasy in which he is accepted into the priesthood and almost immediately becomes Pope Hadrian the Seventh.

As he steps into his newly-created world a faint glow is cast on the pope's throne. The rest of the play is Rolfe's fantasy until the epilogue when he returns to reality.

Heath's performance is flawless. He is able to project Rolfe's frustration, intelligence, and self-interpretation without robbing the other actors of their parts.

FINE SUPPORT

His role is well-supported by Alan Purdy as the Cardinal Archbishop of Pimlico and Jack Droy as the Bishop of Caerleon.

Both Purdy and Droy represent Rolfe's concept of the anachronistic ideas of the Roman Catholic church. The obvious comfort in their roles calms the atmosphere left after numerous bursts of rage by Rolfe.

ASSASSINATED

As Sant, a handsome, wealthy, dapper businessman, Drean tends to forget the evil elements of his role — he's difficult to hate.

Near the end of the play Hadrian is assassinated by Sant. Drean's overly-cool portrayal of Sant leaves the audience sympathizing with Hadrian rather than despising Sant. He's forgotten just a little too easily.

Historical accuracy in costume was achieved through close co-operation between designer Biddy Gaddes and Victoria's Bishop Remi de Roo of the Roman Catholic Diocese.

The presentation of Hadrian the Seventh is an attempt to open Christ Church Cathedral to the arts.

WRONG DESIGN

Two problems may make it one of the last attempts — acoustics and vision.

The building was designed for church services, not plays and concerts.

All of the actors in Hadrian the Seventh are experienced and vocally well-equipped but the structure of the building causes reverberation problems making it difficult to distinguish the words.

The pews, apart from being rock-hard, are not graduated. Thus, a player on the stage is not visible unless he or she is standing.

Problems such as these cause some degree of discomfort for the audience and much of the quality of any musical or theatrical presentation is consequently lost.

It's unfortunate — the church provides an excellent setting for plays of considerable religious significance such as Hadrian the Seventh.

MINE PERMIT OPPOSED

A special committee of the Capital Regional District recommended Wednesday that an application for extension of a mine tailing pipeline by Jordan River Mines Ltd. be opposed until the site is inspected.

Public works committee chairman Ald. Les Passmore of Saanich said the committee wants to make sure it gets someone to look at the mining site before the application is accepted.

The company wants its original pollution control permit amended so the point of discharge for two pipes will extend 10 and 40 feet into Juan de Fuca Strait.

The committee, said Passmore, wants a further look to make sure the proposed lines will carry the copper mining residue out to where turbulent waters will disperse it.

THE VIRTUES OF VIOLENCE

TORONTO (CP) — Violence, apparently, has its virtues.

Peter Rickaby, York County's deputy Crown attorney, thinks so, anyway.

The violence in professional hockey, experienced vicariously by its vast audiences in Canada, may have kept Canada out of wars, he told a symposium.

FIRST DETAILED MAP OF MARS ON SALE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. geological survey offered for sale at 75 cents today the first detailed map of the entire surface of the planet Mars.

The map was produced by scientists and technicians at the geological survey's centre of astrogeology in Flagstaff, Ariz., from mosaics of thousands of photographs of Mars taken by the Mariner 9 spacecraft in 1971-72.

Prepared in a "shaded relief" effect, the map measures 36 by 39 inches and is at a scale of about one inch to about 400 miles. It shows the major surface features of the entire planet.

'Scared Like Hell' Supercop Cote Has 'Technical' Job

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

The time: December, 1970.

The place: A suburban street in Montreal.

The scene: hundreds of armed troops and police are gazing at a small house where British trade envoy James Cross is being held by Quebec revolutionaries. It's a stalemate.

Suddenly, an arm emerges from the house and throws a length of lead piping into the middle of the street.

Suddenly, after a brief pause, a car rockets out from behind police lines, It swerves by the piece of piping, a door opens and a hand picks up the pipe. The car roars away.

A few blocks away, Lieutenant Robert Cote, head of the technical service, Montreal urban police department, casually pops the plugging out of the end of the pipe and pulls out a piece of paper with a message written on it.

The kidnappers want to negotiate a passage to Cuba for Cross's life.

Not for him the drudgery of routine detective work, or the boredom of a suburban patrol car : Lieut. Cote deals only with high-powered time bombs that might go off at any minute, underwater searches for crucial pieces of evidence, and sub-machine gun shoot-outs with desperate criminals.

He has gained such a reputation that last year he was the first policeman ever to gain the Order of Canada, and he is in demand all over the continent for his expertise in what is known as the "technical" field of police work.

Cote was in Victoria on Wednesday, but he hastened to make it clear that British Columbia is not about to become the victim of a terrorist campaign: he said he was addressing a "security conference" of RCMP and armed forces officials. Sorry, that was all he could say.

How do you go about teaching men to defuse bombs?

"It's not a trade. It's something you pick up. It's an art," says Cote, a 36-year-old

'It's an art' he says

teddy bear of a man who could as easily be a shoe salesman as a supercop.

How did he feel about defusing bombs, having worked on more than 200 since the technical squad was formed in 1963 mainly to combat the growing terrorism of the Front de Liberration du Quebec?

"You're scared like hell," Cote replies in his heavy French-Canadian accent.

"... even more than the average cop. You've seen more than a few bodies after a bomb has exploded. You've got your kisser hanging over a ticking clock. I can tell you, your heart goes overtime."

This is the true rhetoric of the role — it could be Madigan, Bullitt, Dick Tracy sitting in Room 212 of the Executive House hotel. The mind flashes to the beautiful heroic cop's wife — Genevieve Bujold, Ali McGraw. Is there a Mrs. Cote?

There is indeed.

It appears she and Lieutenant Cote got married between two bombs in 1968.

A few months later she miscarried a pair of twins during a rash of bomb scares as her husband went from "suspicious package" to "suspicious package."

Finally she gave birth to a bouncing boy, who was promptly named Richard Pierre in honor of Richard Cross and Pierre Laporte, two kidnapped men whom Lieut. Cote fought to save.

Mrs. Cote's fears were not unfounded. In 1968 Lieut. Cote defused a bomb which had been planted in Montreal's downtown Eaton's, then when he inspected the mechanism he found it was due to detonate in two minutes.

"But in every incident it makes no difference really," Cote says.

How do you get volunteers for such work?

"Most people believe we have problems getting men, but actually it's the opposite. You see, the work seems interesting. Routine is a big problem in most police work. In the technical squad there is not much of that. Right now, for example, we have four men diving in the St. Lawrence for a murder weapon."

"Even in a big police department like ours you can't have separate teams of divers, bomb experts and sharp-shooters because incidents simply don't happen that often. So, you have one jack-of-all-trades group like ours."

"And it is interesting work. This is what I like to do. I fly all over the country telling people about my work. This is my life."

Some people think it's a charmed life.

People ask Cote to pray for others

When Reader's Digest magazine published an article about Cote's exploits against the FLQ, he was flooded with letters asking him to pray for people's souls.

"They must have thought I had been so lucky with bombs I had some special contact upstairs," Cote says.

In spite of the risks he takes in the course of duty, Cote gets no danger money.

"Detectives handle all kinds of danger in different fields of duty," he says. "It just happens that we handle bombs."

Cote thinks technical squads across the country will continue to get better equipped.

"This is a problem facing every city. The FLQ used bombs, but labor and the underworld are using bombs. I feel it's with us to stay."

In spite of this conviction, Cote admits that bombing incidents dropped drastically in Montreal in 1972.

"It compares with 1970 as a quiet year," he says, glancing out at the Empress Hotel as though checking for snipers on the roof. "We only had 29 explosions and we dismantled six other 'suspicious packages'."

Central Saanich Mothers Rally To Local Police

By PAT MUNSON

Mrs. Shirley Monych, 7494 East Saanich Rd. said Wednesday 20 copies of the petition now available for signing in stores and garages will be taken to the regular meeting of Central Saanich council on Monday.

Early this week, the news that council is considering a changeover in police service caused a furore in this community of 5,100 residents.

An RCMP study requested by council in November estimates that the municipality could be policed for about $70,000, about $51,000 less than the 1973 budget figure for Central Saanich police force.

But a number of local taxpayers protest that the municipal police are worth the extra money.

"You can't put a dollar sign on certain things in life" says Mrs. John Windsor, 934 Gregg, who has raised three children in this district.

"Our police know the children's homes and parents and can quickly spot youngsters who are getting out of line. They are not regarded in this community as "the fuzz."

Petition organizer Monych, mother of four, is impressed with the loyalty and goodwill of the local force which was instituted in 1951.

"For instance, the Lions Club is trying to start a lacrosse team and Chief John Gelling is busy rounding up players," she said. "The police control things without pressuring the kids. The policemen are all fathers themselves."

MONYCH
. . . organizer

"They do a helluva good job and kids will talk to them — they won't go to the RCMP."

Rev. Ivan Futter said a force operating out of Sidney RCMP detachment office might find it difficult to cover Central Saanich and suggests a tie-up with Saanich municipal police force might be more practical.

Futter emphasized he had high regard for the RCMP.

"I was a magistrate in Port Hardy and I couldn't have asked for a finer body of men."

Mayor A. M. Galbraith, who meets the local police force in a closed council committee meeting tonight, said a decision will probably be made by the end of February.

"We are elected to get the best dollar value we can," said Galbraith. "North Saanich has a lower mill rate than we do and this is how they do it. We would certainly be criticized if we did not investigate comparative costs."

In 1971, North Saanich paid $40,000 for RCMP working out of the Sidney office, Central Saanich paid $85,000 for the municipal force.

In 1972, North Saanich paid $52,000 and Central Saanich, $100,000.

Although the cost per man (estimated at $19,000 annually) is about the same in both municipalities, the provincial government absorbs 50 per cent of RCMP costs for the first six members.

For additional members, the cost split is 75-25, with the municipality paying the major share.

Galbraith pointed out that RCMP supply their own patrol cars, radio equipment and headquarters. Within five years, said the mayor, Central Saanich will have to look at new police accommodation. At present, the municipality pays a costly jail cell rental to Victoria police force because the local station has no cell space.

"New police accommodation could be a major capital cost," he said.

Recently established changes in RCMP policy recommend that men live in the communities which they police and take more part in local activities.

"If we do go to RCMP service, it will of course take time for the men to get known," says Galbraith.

The new policy indicates that members will stay in one place for several years, rather than the two-year transfer basis which has, in the past, kept RCMP on the move and often unmarried.

Council is getting plenty of feedback on the proposed change. Mayor Galbraith commented: "If the people want to pay for the present force, well and good!"

Helmcken Rd. Site Abandoned By Regional Hospital Board

The Capital Regional Hospital District Board has abandoned plans to build an extended-care hospital on a 34-acre site on Helmcken Rd.

At a meeting Wednesday, the board accepted an alternative proposal by chairman Art Young to build a 75-bed extended care unit on a smaller site (four acres or more) in the heart of the urban development of Colwood-Langford.

The 225-bed Helmcken Rd. hospital had already been approved in principle by the board.

The new government policy of preserving farmland also influenced the decision, he said.

"It seems funny, it's taken us three years to go almost in a circle," he said.

A study of projected extended care bed requirement by the research division of the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service "clearly indicates" that the area west of Parsons Bridge needs no more than 45 extended care beds, Young said.

"This is a further reason why the provincial government has been loath to proceed with the purchase of a site which was destined for a 225-bed extended care unit," he said.

The proposed alternative 75-bed unit in Colwood-Langford will act as an eventual replacement for St. Mary's Priory Hospital, said Young.

It will also "have built into its design the capability of adding a community health centre."

YOUNG

The board approved in principle the allocation of the 150 other extended care beds to a site within the urban core of the region, possibly near an existing acute hospital.

"Certainly the land is available at Jubilee (Hospital)" for the extra beds, said Mayor Frances Elford of Oak Bay.

In other business, the board appointed A. W. E. Pitkethley to make an in-depth study of the potential of the 270-bed Veterans' Hospital as a "community resource."

Cost of Pitkethley's report, which is to be completed by the end of March, will be a maximum of $3,000, and the federal government will pay half.

The report will go to federal and provincial representatives negotiating sale of the hospital to the provincial government for a nominal fee of $1, said Young.

Q. Can you help me trace a collection of ghost poems, entitled "The Haunted Hour"? — Mrs. M. J. S.

A. The book seems to be out of print, according to local book stores. The Public Library has no information on book or title, but suggests you check at used book stores.

Hall Records Asked

Victoria city council will be asked to have a dozen church halls in the city submit an annual financial statement and a record of hall use.

Council's finance committee was told today that some church halls are charging up to $125 a day for their facilities.

At the same time, church halls are tax exempt.

Assessor Alf Joyce said he gets many complaints from community halls, such as legion clubs, which have to pay taxes, and which find themselves competing against church halls.

Joyce said a city council report suggested in 1964 that church halls be asked to submit a financial statement.

Ald. Alf Hood said church halls should have the same rules as community halls.

"If they are renting them, then we tax them," he said.

Hood said the halls could be taxed on the basis of their financial statement each year.

Ald. Bert Tindall: "What you're suggesting is an honor system . . ."

Ald. Hood: "If you can't put a church on an honor system, who can you? . . . (laughter)".

Ald. Percy Frampton said the city should "try it out for a year." But on second thoughts, he pointed out, a church hall might be rented out only half a dozen times and find itself paying almost as much tax as its income.

In spite of these doubts the committee agreed to recommend to council anyway that church halls be required to submit financial statements. Taxation may or may not follow.

WARM WELCOME by Chef Ian Hendry awaits the first eight residents scheduled to arrive at Tillicum Lodge for the elderly today. The $1 million provincial government rest home in Saanich will provide personal care for 152 older people who are not confined to bed but need help with day-to-day tasks. No official opening date has been set for the rest home which is located just off Interurban Road near Glendale Hospital. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Blue Line Versus Blue Line

Subject to a legal check, B.C. Hydro Royal Blue Line sightseeing buses may face a line of police when the tourist season opens.

Hydro is refusing to pay a $140 licence fee required by the city on each of its buses.

Hydro claims its licence charges are included in a grant the crown corporation pays to the city.

But Acting Mayor Tom Christie doesn't quite agree.

"If there's a licence of $140 per bus they should pay it just like everybody else," he told city council's tourism committee today.

"We should send them an invoice for the fees," he said, "and if they don't pay then we'll just have to call in the police and tell them: No Tickee, No Shirtee."

City officials were not sure whether bus tour licences were specifically mentioned in the Hydro's grant. The matter was referred to the city solicitor for study.

In other business the city manager reported that he had applied for $850,000 from the provincial Winter Capital Projects Fund for a Broughton Street parking garage. The building will contain 400 parking spaces, between Broughton and Courtney streets east of Douglas.

City Passengers Frisked

The first phase of a new security program at Victoria International Airport which requires all boarding passengers to be searched started today.

"The program is strictly a hand search of boarding passengers now, pending arrival of electronic inspection equipment," an Air Canada spokesman said.

Security will eventually require that every passenger undergo an inspection with a metal-detector or magnetometer and a search of all hand luggage.

The program, expected to cost more than $1 million a year will affect all flights coming into Canada from the States.

It's expected that the measures will be in effect at all domestic airports served by the airline and at all foreign airports to which it flies by the end of the month.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Friday, Feb. 16, 1973

By SYDNEY OMARR

Some of my favorites, who are friends of astrology: Merv Griffin, Cancer; Jayne Meadows, Libra; Vincent Price, Gemini; Alan Jay Lerner, Capricorn; Kim Novak, Aquarius; Marlene Dietrich, Capricorn; Della Reese, Cancer; Fernando Lamas, Capricorn; Susan Strasberg, Gemini, and Henry Miller, Capricorn.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): You can have more fun than has been usual of late. Accent is on love, creativity, the fulfillment of hopes and wishes. Skip details. Enjoy yourself. Recharge batteries. Social life accelerates. You can make meaningful contacts.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): You are making more progress than might be supposed. What appears to be opposition has no substance. Know it and respond accordingly. You are able now to know what to do and when to do it. Aquarius is involved.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Travel can be gratifying. Virgo individual can show you the way. Status quo is due to be shoved aside. New deal is in offing. Communications are important. Be receptive. Let relatives, neighbors know that changes are in order.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): You could be pleasantly surprised by financial gain. Family member plays instrumental role. Taurus, Libra are involved. Friend backs you in legal dispute. You are able to put major points across. Protect interests.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Lunar cycle is high; your judgment is apt to be on target. One who previously opposed you now is ready to become an ally. Know it and proceed accordingly. Pisces is involved. Be selective. Don't brood about past. Future can be bright.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): What appears to be a setback could boomerang in your favor. Know it and rid yourself of secret fears, doubts. Older individual is working behind scenes on your behalf. Accept added responsibility.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Some friends make unusual requests. Draw line between goodwill and foolishness. Know when to stop. Luxury item is in picture. Remember budget resolutions. Realize you cannot really buy affection.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Promotional activities are accented. You have much to offer. Key now is to let others know about it. Come out of shell. Deal with persons in authority. Don't pull punches where principles are concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Follow through on hunch. Heed inner voice. Believe in your own capabilities. Check messages, correspondence. Be sure you are correctly quoted. Some around you tend to be careless at your expense.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Expand horizons. Be flexible. Socialize. Contacts made now can prove valuable in future. One you admire returns the compliment. Surprise in store on connection with money, gift. Debt is repaid. Sagittarian is involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Moderate pace is best—what you ned will come your way. Key is to recognize it when it is available. Scorpio is in picture. Don't make judgments based on surface indications. What glitters does not necessarily have value.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Some seclusion is necessary. You need time to formulate thoughts, ideas. Creative urge is strong—permit it to be expressed. Answers are found within. Clandestine meeting could be featured. Be receptive to one who wants to aid.

If today is your birthday you are concerned with religion, law, spirituality. You are unique, not easy to live with, very much an individual. June could be an outstanding month for you in 1973. You draw to you persons born under Pisces. Trust yourself. Stop brooding about what might have been. Change in domestic area will make you happier.

Sole Food: Well Worth The Price

By MARY MOORE

My fond hope is that every reader in this audience who can buy fresh sole fillets will try this for a guest dinner for it is indeed soul-comforting food.

I have to confess that the sole fillets cost me $1.90 per pound and I bought 2 pounds to serve 6. It was a birthday party so the occasion justified the expenditure.

BAKED SOLE
(Serve 6)

NOTE: This recipe could be used for less expensive fillets so do not be discouraged — be sure to put this recipe to good use with frozen fillets or some other kind if you must.

2 lbs. fresh sole fillets
2 tsp. lemon juice
About ½ tsp. salt
Sprinkling of freshly ground black pepper
1 1-3 c. fresh dairy sour cream

Place the fillets on a large shallow, buttered baking dish which can be carried to the table. (Or if you do not have such a dish line broiler pan with buttered foil to facilitate transferring these to preheated platter.) Fillets may be slightly overlapping as they shrink a little. Sprinkle with the lemon juice and salt and pepper. Then carefully spread all over the top the fresh dairy sour cream.

Place in preheated oven 5 inches under very hot broiler burner. Bake-broil about 10 minutes but stand at the oven for these fillets must not be overcooked. Test the thickest one at centre to see if it flakes and is opaque. If so remove at once and carry to table and serve. (If you have to transfer these to a platter lift them, foil and all, to it so tender fillets are not disturbed.)

You eager hostesses should clip this recipe now for it is a thing of beauty and a joy.

Two corrections to recent recipes appearing here.

In the recipe for lemon squares published Jan. 8 one cup of margarine or butter was missed. The recipe is repeated here:

LEMON SQUARES

FILLING:
1½ pkgs. (1 c. plus 2 tbsp.) commercial lemon pie filling. (I use Jell-o.)
¾ c. sugar
6 tbsp. cold water
3 egg yolks
3 c. hot water

CRUMB MIXTURE:
1¾ c. fine soda cracker crumbs
½ c. brown sugar
¾ c. all-purpose flour
1½ c. coconut (desiccated, strip or flake)
1 c. margarine or butter

Make filling first by mixing lemon pie filling with sugar and cold water. Stir in yolks then hot water and cook stirring until thick and boiling. Cool, stirring once or twice.

Meanwhile mix together all crumb ingredients using pastry blender or your finger tips. Pat 2-3 of mixture into 9x13" ungreased pan, smoothly. (I used pyrex.) Cover evenly with cold lemon filling. Now sprinkle all remaining crumbs over top to cover. Pat them down gently.

Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 20 to 25 minutes or until tinged with gold top and bottom. Chill before cutting into squares.

In the Feb. 8 recipe for 58 Percent Whole Wheat Bread, we forgot to mention that the dough should be let to rise before placing in the oven.

The recipe is repeated here:

58 PER CENT WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

1 pkg. granular or 1 cake yeast
1 tbsp. granulated sugar
¼ c. lukewarm water
2 c. hot water
2 tbsp. brown sugar
2 tbsp. molasses
1 tbsp. salt
3 tbsp. fat (margarine, bacon, butter or shortening)
3½c. whole wheat flour (measured by shaking from bag)
6 tbsp. skim milk powder
About 2½ c. unsifted all-purpose flour

In very large bowl soak yeast and granulated sugar in lukewarm water 10 minutes.

Into another bowl measure hot water and add to it the brown sugar, molasses, salt and fat and cool to lukewarm, stirring to dissolve sugar and salt. Add to risen yeast liquid. Stir in the whole wheat flour and skim milk powder and beat 100 times.

Now add about 1½ cups white flour and mix in as well as you can. Sprinkle kneading board with remaining flour, turn dough out on it and knead 200 times. This is lovely dough to knead. (Leave any remaining flour on board for second kneading.)

Return dough to bowl, grease top, cover well and let rise in cold oven with pan of hot water under it for 2 hours or until doubled in size. (You do not have to replenish the water.) Turn out on floured board and knead 200 times. (Most of flour will be kneaded in.) Cut in halves. Shape into 2 loaves. Put in greased standard loaf pans, let rise and put in oven heated to 375 deg. Fahr. but immediately reduce heat to 350 deg. Fahr. and bake about one-half hour or until when tapped loaf sounds hollow. Cool on cake racks.

Wealthy Married Man Offers Her No Security

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a very wealthy married man for the last three years. I was married when we started seeing each other, but I got a divorce because he said if I were "free" he would divorce his wife and marry me.

He told me that he had not laid a hand on his wife for five years, now all of a sudden she's pregnant! (He explained it by saying he had to give her something for their last anniversary!)

I am wondering now if I am foolish to wait for him? He has children, and so have I. I quit work to be available to see him during the day, but there are days I never see him, and I am getting bored. He takes good care of me financially, but I am a young woman yet and need to know the future is secure.

I have had offers of dates with other men, but have stayed true to him. Please tell me if you think I'm being played for a fool. Or should I wait out his wife? — TIRED AND IMPATIENT

DEAR T. AND I.: Why don't you give HIM something for his anniversary? His walking papers. If it's security you're after, you won't find it with him.

DEAR ABBY: When you go to a restaurant and order a sandwich, and it comes with a few slices of pickle on the edge of the plate, are you supposed to eat the pickle? Or is it just there for decoration?

We took a survey at our school. Out of 125 students, 75 rejected the pickle, and 50 ate it (mostly with their fingers). Can you just imagine all the pickles that are wasted in the city of New York alone? How would you vote, Abby? — IN A PICKLE

DEAR IN: With the pickle eaters.

DEAR ABBY: You have absolutely made my year! I have had 21 years of moans and groans because of the name I gave my youngest daughter. And then you come along and print a letter from a girl who at age 18 actually chose that very name out of all the names in the world!

My thanks to you, and to Bethany Lyn Brown from the mother of another Bethany Lyn. — MRS. HULL.

DEAR ABBY: I have read that the quality of one's voice changes with age, and I'm sure it's true. And that is my problem because my husband said to me the other day: "I can't help it, but your voice just grates on my nerves!"

I have always been considered a good conversationalist and my personality has been described as "bubbling." But now I am so self-conscious about my voice I don't talk any more than I absolutely have to. And when I do talk to my husband, I try to use different tones and pitches so as not to irritate him.

I would be very grateful to you or to any of your readers if this condition of mine could be improved. Thank you. — UNHAPPY.

DEAR UNHAPPY: On the chance that your problem is medical, first you should see a throat specialist for a complete examination of your vocal chords. If you are healthy, a speech therapist or a voice coach might be very helpful. Your local college (speech or drama department) can make recommendations. And good luck!

You know, of course, that in addition to its ten provinces, Canada comprises two territories. But do you know the boundaries of these territories?

The Northwest Territories take in all of Canada north of the 60th parallel, except those regions that are in the Yukon Territory, Quebec and Newfoundland. They also include many islands in Hudson Bay, James Bay and Ungava Bay.

The total population of the NWT is only 34,000. Of these 7,000 people live in Yellowknife, the capital. Two thirds of the population are Indians and Eskimos.

You will also learn that the government of the NWT operates 55 schools with an enrolment of over 10,000 children. In addition, there are free correspondence courses for pupils who live in an area where no instruction is available.

For the pamphlet which is full of further fascinating facts write to: Information Division, department of Indian affairs and northern development, Ottawa, Ont. K1A-0H4. Please allow at least three to four weeks for delivery.

Jobs-to-Fit Plan Proposed

EDMONTON (CP) — The possibility of using two qualified persons to divide the duties of one full-time job may be one way to ease willing housewives into the working world, says Helen Hunley, minister without portfolio in the Alberta government.

Miss Hunley, Conservative MLA for Rocky Mountain, said the concept is under study by the provincial government and that the "so-called problems you run into with this system are all really imaginary."

Speaking to a forum on women and work, Miss Hunley said one example was two equally proficient secretaries accepting a single full-time job and dividing it to suit their personal needs.

One could work mornings and the other afternoons or they could divide the job by taking on two or more straight days in every work week, she said.

In this way, wives and mothers who desire to return to work could do so and still arrange their hours to provide time for household duties.

Miss Hunley said the negligible cost of calculating two pay cheques for the one position would be outlined by the advantage of being able to rearrange schedules due to sickness and by the greater efficiency of a happy staff.

Sporting With the Classics

Designers of men's wear are returning to classical models as they prepare their summer '72 collections of sports and leisure fashions.

The collections sees a revival in V-neck sweaters and a general trend away from gimmicks.

Double-knit leisure garments, which are experiencing an up-surge in popularity, will stress the unconstructed look in men's jackets. The same softer look is also evident in men's swimwear fabrics, while beach styles will include the supple Continental cut which is briefer and form-fitting.

Typical of summer knitwear, body shaped and streamlined, is sweater-jacket (left) by British manufacturer Wolsey Ltd. In medium weight Courtelle, this zip-front style has a turtleneck and is highlighted by double cabling, while deep ribbing at the cuts and waists emphasize the sleek effect.

Also from Jantzen this season is a zip placket shirt of mesh knit worn under a poplin jacket with diagonally slash-trimmed jacket. The matching shorts have an extension waistband and elasticized back. The fashion look here is red and navy accents. The fabric is a polyester blend for easy-care.

Counsellors in Demand

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Numbers of students seeking help from University of Victoria's counselling centre took a big jump during the fall term.

Counsellors conducted more individual interviews during October and November than in any previous year — 294 in October, compared with 151 the year before; and 338 in November, compared with 169 in November 1971.

Dr. Horace Beach, the psychologist from Halifax who became director of the counselling centre last July, isn't certain what has caused the surge.

He said he has tried to make the centre in the Clearihue Building and its staff "psychologically and physically available" — approachable in every sense.

MEETING STUDENTS

"We have made an attempt this year to get out of our offices and meet the students where they are," Beach said.

However, the workload placed on Beach and his three counsellors doesn't always make this easy.

Since Beach has assumed direction of the centre, it has become "more oriented toward the range of personal problems that students have."

Course planning, which was the bulk of the centre's work before 1971, is now left to the arts and science academic advising centre under Dr. Esme Foord.

Students now come to Beach with three types of problems: personal problems, learning and study problems, and career worries. These have ranged from suicide attempts, depression and nightmares to difficulty concentrating, reading problems, and questions about education programs and vocations.

PRESSURES

Lack of focus, much more than pressure from courses or exams, is the problem with many students, Beach said. Many are uncertain what they want to do, both at the university and once they leave.

It is to give this focus that periodic tests and examinations are valuable for students, he said. Having year-end finals, and even having finals before a student gets his degree, as they do at Oxford and Cambridge Universities, gives the student a clearly-defined goal, he said.

Besides individual counselling, the centre has been operating three group programs.

One is a six-week reading and study skills course. Another is a group program aimed at improving communication skills, and third is a program teaching self-control of anxiety and worries, and training in relaxation.

Two new group programs are planned — one in career and vocational planning and one in development of personal competence.

Family Planning Centres For Catholics Suggested

TORONTO (CP) — Establishment of Roman Catholic family planning centres across Canada "to provide complete factual information on various methods of fertility control" has been suggested by a committee of the National Catholic Council of Social Services.

The report of the Atlantic Committee on Family Planning also urged Catholic bishops "to take an active part in the setting up of family planning centres in their own dioceses."

SEX STUDY PROJECT SET

LONDON (AP) — Children as young as five will receive sex education at school under a new project to be launched by a government educational advisory body throughout Britain.

The Schools Council, which advises the government on what children should be taught, said today it has appointed 30 teachers in schools throughout Britain to start work in the fall.

Salt Spring Auto Hulk Collection Set

Mountain Hideaway Holdings Ltd. of 2892 Trans-Canada Highway has been awarded the contract for collection of derelict vehicles on Salt Spring Island.

Capital Regional District Board awarded the contract for its Project SAM (salvage, assembly and manufacture) on the island at its meeting Wednesday afternoon.

The company, whose bid was $14 for each derelict car collected, is the same one which collected vehicles for the Capital Regional District in the Colwood-Langford area.

A $2,000 surplus in the Project SAM collection in Colwood-Langford allowed the district to extend the project to Salt Spring Island.

The board agreed to use the property of Walter Twa on Blackburn Rd. as a depot for the project. In return the board will crush and dispose of all derelict vehicles, household appliances and other objects suitable for crushing on Twa's property.

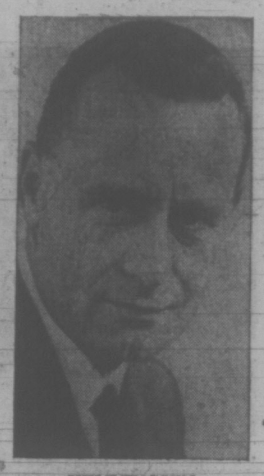

In other business, the board gave third reading to a bylaw establishing a development area on the Sooke Lake Rd. at Humpback Rd. where a shopping centre is to be built.

The board accepted the recommendationof its zoning committe that a request for rezoning of the land from residential I to commercial be denied, and a development area be created instead.

The Capital Regional District will then negotiate a land-use contract with the applicant.

The board approved a recommendation of its zoning committee to write the department of lands, forests and water resources asking that all publically-owned foreshore lands on Langford, Glen and Florence Lakes be kept by the Crown for public recreational use.

The recommendation was prompted by concern that some people were creating fills on the three lakes, said zoning committee chairman M. H. Holmes.

HEMMINGSEN

Sympathy Shown Boundary Protest

NANAIMO (CP) — Mr. Justice J. S. Aikins, chairman of the Electoral Boundaires Commission, said Wednesday the commission is sympathetic toward two major changes suggested at a public hearing on the proposed Nanaimo-Alberni federal riding.

The B.C. Supreme Court judge added, however, that any changes will have to take into consideration the surrounding ridings.

The commission is conducting a six-week tour of B.C. ridings, staging hearings on proposed boundary changes in federal ridings resulting from population shifts.

One of the changes suggested in Nanaimo was the inclusion of all of the Harewood Improvement District in the proposed Nanaimo-Alberni riding. Current plans call for splitting the improvement district, part of Greater Nanaimo.

Speakers argued that Harewood residents have more in common with Nanaimo and do not belong in the Cowichan-Malahat riding.

The second major change proposed was omission of the northern section of Vancouver Island—including the communities of Gold River, Tahsis and Zeballos from the Nanaimo-Alberni riding.

Speakers said this northern section should be included in the Comox-Powell River constituency.

But Aikins said the commission is concerned about the principle of 80,000 people per riding. He said some leeway is allowed, but added the commission wants to have ridings which are large in area contain somewhat smaller than required populations.

Tsitika Logging 10 Years Away

VANCOUVER (CP) — A company spokesman said Wednesday that no logging is planned by MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. in the main part of the Tsitika Valley on Vancouver Island for at least 10 years.

J. O. Hemmingsen, executive vice-president of natural resources, said this should provide adequate time for studies of the area proposed by environmentalists.

He issued a statement in Vancouver on the company's operations in the area northwest of Campbell River following representations made Friday to Robert Williams, minister of lands and forests by conservation groups.

The conservationists asked for a halt on logging roads being built in the area pending an assessment of the area cal reserve.

Hemmingsen denied that the company was pushing the roads in order to prevent the preservation of the land.

"The only reason the company is operating in this particular area at the moment is to remove some timber to facilitate the construction of a government highway from Kelsey Bay to Port Hardy," he said.

Hemmingsen said loss of the Tsitika timber rights would cut off employment for 290 logging and mill workers and for 400 others involved in service industries dependent on the forest industry.

Violinist to Rest

PARIS (AP) — Soviet violinist David Oistrakh has been ordered to take a three-week rest after suffering a mild heart attack, doctors said Tuesday. Oistrakh was taken ill Sunday night in Dijon during a concert tour.

Jury Finds No Blame In Deaths

A Victoria couple, killed last month on the Trans-Canada Highway died accidentally, a Duncan coroner's jury has decided.

No blame was attached in the traffic deaths of Brian McLennan, 46, and his wife Hildegard, of 1940 Burnside West, Saanich.

The couple was killed instantly Jan. 4 when their car swerved into the path of an oncoming pickup truck.

Ganges to Become Rescue Station

An inflatable rescue boat will be stationed at Ganges on Salt Spring Island early this summer.

The boat with inflatable sides and hull, and powered by an outboard motor, will be similar to three rescue craft based at Victoria, Long Beach and Mayne Island, Herb Buchanan, transport ministry regional director, said Wednesday.

The boat, to be manned by university students, is part of a program to improve rescue services on Vancouver Island and Gulf Islands waters.

The Ministry of Transport has been criticized in the past for its lack of rescue services.

Buchanan said $1.5 million is spent annually for marine rescue operations in B.C.

Injunction Asked

VANCOUVER (CP) — Denny's Restaurant Wednesday applied for an injunction to remove a picket line and a declaration that employees conspired to injure business. Pickets said 21 employees have been fired in the dispute over the length of time customers can stay in the restaurant, job security and payment for staff meetings.

3-Year Contract At Growers Wine

A new three-year contract has been agreed between Growers Wine and Local 300 of the United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers covering 50 employees.

The agreement provides for a wage increase of $1.20 an hour. The former average rate was $4.47 an hour.

Other changes include a cost-of-living bonus, cumulative sick leave and a dental plan paid 75 per cent by the company.

Non-contributory pension plan provides payments of about $360 a month and an employee does not lose a higher pay rate if posted to a lower classsification temporarily.

SHIP PICKETED IN PT. ALBERNI

PORT ALBERNI — The Cyprus-registered freighter Armar, moored here was picketed Wednesday by its 24-man crew.

They said they were seeking their paycheques and better working conditions.

With two longshoremen acting as interpreters, one crew member, Hassan Bessuki, said he hadn't received a paycheque in five months.

Contracts produced by the crew indicated they were paid £25 to £35 for two months work.

The men said they had also picketed the ship in Sweden and Montreal. Some crewmen said the captain offered them £75 each in Montreal if they would return to the ship. The men said they received only £35 once the ship was at sea.

A Lebanese crewmen, Rachid Deitour, said a 12-month contract had been altered to read 24 months after he had signed it.

Captain Hiraclis Sotsolos was not available for comment.

No Skagit Flooding—Davis

OTTAWA (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis told the Commons Wednesday he is certain the Skagit River Valley in British Columbia will not be flooded.

"I may be sticking my neck out a bit, but I'll certainly say there is no possibility of flooding taking place," the minister said.

He gave the assurance under pressure from John Fraser (PC—Vancouver South) during debate on supplementary environment-department spending.

Fraser said much uncertainty remains in the minds of groups opposing the proposed flooding of the river valley by raising the height of the Ross Dam on the Skagit below the Canada-U.S. boundary.

Raising the dam, to expand power production facilities in the state of Washington, was agreed to by the Social Credit government of former B.C. premier W. A. C. Bennett.

Premier David Barrett, has said repeatedly it will not consent to the project.

Before giving his assurance to the House, Davis said the key concern in the issue at present is not the possibility of flooding but the question of compensation arising from the reversed B.C. decision.

He said the Seattle Light and Power Co., which entered into a contract with the Bennett government, stands to lose a considerable amount of money from the decision.

British Columbia, in effect, has torn up the contract and lawyers are now jockeying to settle the compensation issue, he said.

Fraser said Davis and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp had both indicated in the past that flooding was unlikely but there had been no flat statement from the federal government that the project would not go ahead.

He asked Davis to say "positively and absolutely" that the flooding would not occur. The minister then gave his assurance.

Mary Van Stolk

'Battered Child' Author Speaks Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal laws need to be strengthened to protect the rights of children, author Mary Van Stolk of Edmonton said in an angry voice Wednesday.

"If an adult did to another adult what some adults do to children—just as if it were their right to beat their kids—they'd be slapped in jail," she said during an interview.

"Death by child-beating is just a lily-livered term for murder," said the U.S.-born former model and mother of three.

Mrs. Van Stolk, author of a book called The Battered Child in Canada, is encouraged by recent indications that the federal government is taking the plight of battered babies more seriously.

She was to meet the health department's national advisory committee on child battering today and Friday.

Mrs. Van Stolk wants to see penalties—fines of about $1,000—for those who know of child-battering and don't report it to social welfare authorities.

She believes doctors should lead in reporting because they are in a position to recognize child-battering cases, but she would extend the fines to anyone who knew of child-battering, including neighbors.

Her new book now is being used as a reference text in medical and nursing schools and in social work programs. In it, she gives brief case histories of court cases of battered children.

She said one doctor recently told her he believed there was at least one case of child battering every day in that province and probably 12 deaths a year.

"I'd say it was at least that — and probably a lot more," she said.

Born in Milwaukee and raised in the United States, she became a model in 1952 and later a partner in an advertising agency.

In 1957, she moved to Edmonton, became interested in movements toward a "sane nuclear policy," worked on radio, began producing film documentaries and formed her own film company. She is a founder and president of an Edmonton antipollution group called S.T.O.P. and is co-chairman of the Alberta Human Rights Association's committee on battered children.

Tribes Win Vital Support In Jurisdiction Dispute

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The Spokane and Coeur D'Alene Indian tribes have won the support of Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton in a dispute over ownership and jurisdiction of two Washington Water Power Co. dam sites, their attorney said Wednesday.

Robert D. Dellwo, Spokane attorney for the two tribes, said he was advised Mitchell Melich, solicitor for the interior department and acting for Morton, had filed a petition with the Federal Power Commission in Washington, D.C., to intervene in the matter of a licence application by the power company.

"In effect, the Washington Water Power Co.'s original application would be amended to include the two dams — the Little Falls Dam on the southeast corner of the Spokane Indian Reservation and the Post Falls (Idaho) Dam — within the jurisdiction of the federal Power Commission," Dellwo said

He said the two dams are not now within FPC jurisdiction and the company claims it does not require licensing of them.

Dellwo said he believes if the FPC acquires jurisdiction over the two dams the company would be compelled to recognize the tribe's rights to ownership of the dam sites, meaning the tribes would be entitled to return of the sites or reasonable compensation.

Tories Lash Grits For 'Observer' Role

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Conservative opposition charged Wednesday that the federal government has abrogated its constitutional responsibility to protect James Bay Indians under pressure from the Quebec government which wants to see a massive hydro-electric development in the region.

The Tories and New Democrats welcomed Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien back to the House of Commons after a lengthy illness with a prolonged attack on the government for not helping the James Bay Indians in their court battle against the project.

Flora MacDonald (PC—Kingston and The Islands) quoted in the House from what she said was a memo to cabinet last July to charge that Ottawa has restricted itself to "the role of an observer" in the hearings.

In a statement outside the House later, she said the document seems to prove that the federal government has abdicated its constitutional responsibility to the native people of the region under the British North America Act and the Quebec Boundaries Extension Act of 1912, under which the territory became part of the province.

"This role of observer, which was a complete reversal of the original role, it should be noted, was agreed to at the behest of the Quebec government, the very provincial government which set up the agency James Bay Development Corporation the Indians are now battling," Mrs. MacDonald said.

She demanded to know:

Why Chretien acceded to the "order" of the provincial government's chief negotiator that Ottawa act only as observer at the injunction hearings now being held in Montreal;

How many department of regional economic expansion grants will be diverted to the corporation since the president of the JBDC has been appointed mayor of the James Bay municipality with special responsibility for regional development;

A long, long look at freedom

HOW WERE PRISONERS TREATED?

Beatings, Shackles and Years of Silence . . .

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — One of the 27 Americans freed by the Viet Cong guerrillas in South Vietnam said that he spent much of his five years in captivity in shackles and solitary confinement.

"I have spoken more since I was freed Monday than in all the five years I was a prisoner," Michael Hugh Kjome, a civilian from Decorah, Iowa, told staff at the Clark Air Base Hospital.

A contract employee with the United States Agency for International Development, he was captured in Saigon during the 1968 Communist Tet lunar new year offensive.

A few other Americans were reported to have told of beatings and ill treatment, such as salt rubbed on wounds by their captors.

Tight security prevented correspondents from talking directly with the returned prisoners.

Hanoi's Vietnam News Agency charged, meanwhile, that most of the Viet Cong prisoners released by South Vietnamese on Monday were "in bad shape due to savage torture, inhuman treatment and frequent transfer from one prison to another."

Hospital staff close to the freed U.S. prisoners reported a big difference from prisoners who returned after the Korean War.

They said no one has as yet observed or sensed anything but harmony among the Vietnam prisoners.

There were no reported signs of the bitterness and recrimination prevalent among prisoners returned from Korea.

The intelligence debriefings that might bring such feelings to the surface will not be conducted at Clark.

They are being postponed until after the men return to the United States.

. . . Or a Leisurely Dip in the Pool and Playboy?

PARIS (Reuter) — The first detailed description of life in North Vietnamese prisoner-of-war camps was published in a French Communist newspaper today and indicated that United States captives led a better life than North Vietnamese civilians.

Although the prisoners lived in relatively austere conditions, they had the use of a swimming pool, read U.S. publications — including Playboy — and had more food than the average North Vietnamese, the report indicated.

The description of life in the PoW camps appeared in an interview granted to the French Communist party daily newspaper L'Humanite by a North Vietnamese army major in charge of prisoners released by North Vietnam.

The officer in Hanoi said U.S. PoWs were treated to a Christmas dinner of turkey, salad, cake and Vietnamese liquor during the intensified U.S. bombing raids on Hanoi last December.

During their detention, the prisoners were each given 10 cigarettes a day, the report said.

"But on the average, the North Vietnamese state spent 150 dongs a month per pilot for food while the average Vietnamese spends 18 to 30 dongs a month to feed himself," the major said.

The prisoners, he added, were shown one Vietnamese or foreign film a week.

A PIECE OF HISTORY GOES INTO LIMBO

PARIS (UPI) — A piece of history has gone into storage.

Four workmen in blue overalls went into the room where diplomats argued peace for more than four years and took apart the celebrated and controversial round table they sat around.

The table's shape became an issue that caused an uproar and held up the Vietnam peace negotiations for two months in 1968. It was the table secretary of state William Rogers and other diplomats used Jan. 27 when they signed the Vietnam settlement.

A foreign ministry spokesman watched the table come apart in 20 pieces and predicted it was unlikely anyone would put it together again.

"It is too big," he said. The detachable rim of the table cannot be usedd again because its shape, that of a doughnut, is not practical.

CANNIBAL WEDDING 'EXCITING'

By GHAFUR FADYL

JAKARTA (AP) — The adventure of Wyn Sargent, an American writer-photographer who married a tribal chief in the jungles of West Irian, ended Wednesday. The Indonesian government ordered her to leave Indonesia by Saturday.

Miss Sargent, a tall, slim woman in her 40s, said in a telephone interview she had exciting moments during her 4½-month experience among one of the most primitive savage tribes in the world, "where cannibalism is still practised."

She said her marriage to Obaharok, a tribal chief from the territory of Siapkosi Muliame near the muddy frontier town of Wamena in the central highlands of the Baliem Valley, was not legal "for both of us agreed not to legalize the marriage."

"When I first tried to see Obaharok, he had 30 warriors around the village to keep foreigners out. But I brought three gifts—an axe, a long knife and a spade—for the chief, and he was overwhelmed," she said.

"I married Obaharok to bring the three savage warring tribes to live together in peace and harmony. And it was only a traditional wedding."

Miss Sargent said she spent some exciting times trying to bring the hostile tribes together in friendship in the jungled region by becoming a blood sister to two tribal chiefs and by going through a traditional wedding with Obaharok.

"They cut my wrist and the wrists of the other two chiefs, bled them together with my hands and thus made us blood brothers and sister," Miss Sargent related.

She said her Jan. 8 wedding to Obaharok brought "thousands and thousands" of West Irian tribesmen to the ceremony.

"The big chiefs killed 25 pigs and we ate together marking the peginning of a peaceful era for them."

Miss Sargent did not say whether local Indonesian government authorities were invited to the wedding. A previous report from West Irian said it was Miss Sargent who gave 11 pigs and five headdresses to Obaharok as a wedding dowry.

She was expelled from the jungle area because the Indonesian military command felt her activities were "detrimental to the development of the region."

Miss Sargent said the warring savage tribes of Analoga, Wiyagoba and Siapkosi now are living in peace and harmony.

"When I first came to Obaharok, three of his (Obaharok's) men had been killed by the enemy tribes. Cannibalism still exists among these savages and a person has to kill another to prove he has reached manhood."

Miss Sargent, a widow from Huntington Beach, Calif., said she first went to West Irian to take pictures and study the life of the West Irian tribes and "certainly not to study the sex life of the tribes."

WEDDING BOUQUET in hand, American writer-photographer Wyn Sargent, dressed in bushwacker hat and jungle garb ponders her pending expulsion from West Irian following her marriage to a cannibal chieftain there that Indonesian authorities felt was "detrimental" to the country.

Steelworkers' Chief Beats Challenger

TORONTO (CP) — The national office of the United Steelworkers of America today declared William Mahoney re-elected as Canadian director following the first serious threat to his leadership in 16 years.

Results from 505 of the 800 Canadian locals of the country's largest union showed Mr. Mahoney with 23,450 votes to 14,166 for Donald Montgomery, Toronto area supervisor for the union, in Tuesday's balloting.

Establishment-backed Lynn Williams of Toronto also had an insurmountable lead in the race for the key post of director of District 6, taking in all of Canada west of Quebec.

Mr. Williams, assistant to retiring district director Larry Sefton, had polled 17,300 to 5,741 for Harry Greenwood, recording secretary for Local 1005 in Hamilton.

Both the big offices pay $25,000 a year. The directors are elected in a referendum every four years by the union's 180,000 members.

Eskimos Being Forced Into 'Northern Ghetto'

EDMONTON (CP) — A "Northern Ghetto" is being built around native people in the Arctic, Ted Horton, information consultant for the Northwest Territories government claims.

Horton, former editor of the News of the North published in Yellowknife, said the traditional Eskimo lifestyle is dying and that northrn education should emphasize introduction to white society.

Education, accompanied by complete assimilation into white Canadian society was the only way the Eskimo could weather the tide of change directed at the north.

If northern people were confronted with rapid change without proper preparation, they would be condemned to the same fate as the Indian — life on a reserve and dependency on welfare.

"We are condemning the Eskimo people to a miserable existence in a perpetually-frozen museum," he told the association of the Boreal Institute for Northern Studies at the University of Ablerta.

Horton said Eskimo children are instructed in their native tongue in the first years of school when they should be gaining a firm grasp of English.

Eskimos should be taught in higher grades, instead of at first, because learning English in the middle grades was more difficult.

Horton condemned anthropologists who would attempt to "artificially preserve" the Eskimo way of life when its foundations — hunting and fishing — have virtually disappeared.

Eskimo culture could survive as cultures had survived in the homes of other ethnic groups.

Northern education "must teach something of what is beyond the horizon, teach terms of understanding" to lead the Eskimo into white society.

"No matter what's wrong with our way of life, and there's a great deal wrong, we're talking about survival.

"We cannot turn back the

"We cannot turn back th clock ... the indications are that our Northern people must move with us and among us, or not at all."

Health Service Shuffle Seen As Necessary

A reorganization of B.C.'s health services will be necessary to achieve the most efficient provision of services from the proceeds of the province's natural resources, a special government consultant on health said Wednesday.

Dr. Richard Foulkes, director of the Health Security Program Project, a year-long study ordered by Health Minister Dennis Cocke, was speaking to a luncheon meeting of the Vancouver Board of Trade's health care committee.

"Immediate changes must be effected to achieve short-term goals and begin the long process toward a new orientation of the province's $400-million-a-year health services, Foulkes told the meeting.

He said the health system must be decentralized and organized into junction areas, rather than broken up into the various program areas now in operation.

The future functions of the department would include paying for health care, setting standards and providing consultative services and co-ordination, he said.

Foulkes said he would like to see an advisory council near the top of the province's health organization. Near the bottom of the organization would be a greater sense of neighborhood service, he said.

The former administrator of the Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster, who is due to submit his report to Cocke before Oct. 1, said some studies have already been carried out in various health fields.

Community orientation of mental health services is one area already studied, he said.

A dental plan for children is also being worked on by regional dental officers of the health branch and a task force from the B.C. College of Dental Surgeons.

A study of physical fitness programs has been commissioned and an analysis of hospital use and health expenditures is also under way, Foulkes said.

Another area being studied is the concpet of community health centres, he said.

Friendship Week Set

Mayor Peter Pollen issued a proclamation today declaring next week, Feb. 18 to 24, a week of international friendship.

It will be the first time Victoria has been part of the special week, which began last year and is sponsored by the International Esperanto Association in 90 countries.

Highlight of the week will be a masquerade at the local Esperanto Club room at 719A Yates St. from 7:30 to 9 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 23. The public is welcome.

Bill's Babies Like to Dine On His Blood

TECHNICIAN Bill Dean supplies "dinner" to a couple af thousand mosquitoes in his laboratory at Simon Fraser University in Burnaby. He grows the bugs—with his own blood — for research purposes.

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — When Bill Dean yells, "Supper time," the visitor is more likely to hear the beating of thousands of tiny wings than the thunder of charging feet.

For Mr. Dean spends the entire year, even in the coldest tempeartures, being bitten by thousands of mosquitoes.

The problem is that mosquitoes are choosy about their diet. In fact, they'll eat just one thing—blood, fresh blood, preferably of the human variety.

So once a week Mr. Dean rolls up his sleeve, thrusts his arm into the cage and it's supper time for the mosquitoes.

"Ive been bitten so many times by mosquitoes I don't even react any more," he said, explaining that he's been interested in insects since he was a small child.

"Most kids at some time or other are interested in beetles and things," said the English-born technician.

"I just went a step further and began to raise them."

His parents encouraged his interest, Mr. Dean said, until "Dad put his foot down the day I infested the house with ants. From that day on, me and my insects were relegated to the shed at the bottom of the yard."

After leaving school, Mr. Dean got a job as an insect technician trainee at Liverpool University, then moved to British Columbia in 1968, getting a job at SFU .

His charges at the university number in the millions—saw-toothed grain beetles, wax moths, parasitic moths, flies and locusts—besides the mosquitoes.

His colleague in the laboratory is Marcelino Horta, who was employed in a similar job in Portugal.

But when Mr. Horta's turn comes to feed the mosquitoes, the routine is slightly different.

"They just won't bite me," he said. "And when I'm on duty, they feed off shaven guinea pigs, whether they like it or not."

But Mr. Dean says he loves his work.

Mainland Project Shaved

Vancouver architect Arthur Erickson is involved in planning the proposed civic-provincial building complex in downtown Vancouver, Public Works Minister Bill Hartley said Wednesday.

The tallest building would be five or six storeys high, he said.

Hartley said the provincial government has "retained Mr. Erickson to assist us with the planning" of the project, but declined to say in what specific capacity — whether Erickson would act as a consultant or prepare the overall design for the development on three blocks between Hornby and Howe, bounded by Georgia and Nelson.

Erickson has also been commissioned by the City of Victoria to co-ordinate the development concepts for all publicly-owned sites around the Inner Harbor.

Last month, at a joint meeting of Vancouver city council and provincial cabinet ministers, Hartley said the government has agreed to scale down considerably the $100 million, 55-storey building proposed by the former Social Credit administration.

JUNIOR ACHIEVERS HOLDING TRADE FAIR

A group of mini-companies, run by high school students who are members of Junior Achievement, will hold a trade fair this weekend at Eaton's inside the Fort St. entrance.

On sale will be stationery, firestarters, recipe rests and other articles produced by the city's 10 Junior Achievement companies.

The 160 local students who participate in the Junior Achievement club learn to do everything that a big business does — raising capital, selling shares in their company, paying off the shareholders. At the end of the year a Company of the Year is selected.

The trade fair will be open Thursday evening and all day Friday and Saturday.

That's why you'll welcome New Anusol Plus.

If you've ever really suffered from hemorrhoids, you know the kind of relief you'd like to be getting from the medication that you use.

Fast pain relief, for one thing. New Anusol Plus relieves your hemorrhoid pain almost as soon as you apply it.

And Anusol Plus numbs the maddening itch that so often comes with hemorrhoids.

There's even a gentle decongestant that works to reduce the swelling and thus the inflammation.

And while New Anusol Plus works quickly to ease your discomfort, two soothing antiseptic agents are acting to curb infection—thus giving your hemorrhoids a better chance to heal.

One other thing. Since treating your hemorrhoids can sometimes be painful in itself, new Anusol Plus now comes in a silky-smooth cream. Even when spread on inflamed and tender areas, it goes on very easily. And, since the relief it gives lasts for hours, you don't have to apply it so often.

How do we know what you look for in a hemorrhoid medication? Because we've taken the time to find out the answers from hundreds of hemorrhoid sufferers just like you.

For relief from your hemorrhoid symptoms, use new Anusol Plus, in cream or suppository form.

PERSON WORKING

The sign at the right of the photograph above isn't exactly one which is relevant today. Indeed, it would be more apt to rephrase it as it is at left.

Because, women's lib after being an underground movement for many years and then surfacing recently has gone underground again . . . at least it has in Kansas City, Mo., where Elaine Martin works as a cable splicer for the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

The company says it is actively encouraging women to apply for such work and the lady — oops, person — in question says she loves the job which provides "something new every day."

Imitation.

(they say it's the sincerest form of flattery)

The Original is Quasar Color TV, and we've been working on the idea since 1965.

We pioneered the all solid-state idea (when others were using tubes.) We pioneered the printed-circuit module (when others were wiring by hand.) And two years ago we introduced the first "One-button". 5-function, color tuner (when other sets still boasted four or five controls.)

We call it the Quasar System—and there's no mistaking it. Here's what to look for.

1. Solid-state "Mini-Circuits". The incredible thing about them is that they are constantly being improved, made simpler. And each new version fits previous sets.

These solid-state modules do most of the work in a Quasar Color TV. They snap-in, snap-out, can be replaced in minutes—and are inexpensive. And when you eventually replace one, it will be with the newest version of itself. (Instead of buying a whole new TV, you simply replace "Mini-Circuits".)

Motorola has pioneered this retro-fit concept. The combination of solid-state reliability with the anticipation of future technology is the heart of the Quasar System.

2. Insta-Matic Color Tuning. One button tunes all five picture controls: color hue, intensity, brightness, contrast and even the automatic fine tuning. So you don't have to be fiddling half the night. Again, Motorola has pioneered it. And it even has a sixth-sense to keep the colors beautiful when you change channels.

3. The Warranty. Fixed right to the back of your set with a phone number to call if you ever need help. No fine print. No passing the buck. Only Quasar Color TV has it.

4. The Works in a Drawer. It pulls out, so a service technician can usually check out a problem right in your home.

When that happens your set doesn't have to go into the repair shop for a week or two. And you save a lot of money and a lot of aggravation. So don't be fooled. Insist on seeing Quasar Color TV.

What does the Quasar System all add up to? A set that will give you a beautiful picture, that you can depend on, for years to come.

Have a look at the Original.

How will you know you're buying the right set?

The set will have the Works in a Drawer. (It's the only one with the works in a Drawer).

The name is unforgettable.

Tory Fiscal Study Proposes Tax Cuts

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Reductions in the personal income tax and sales taxes are required to speed up the pace of economic recovery in Canada, the research office of Conservative Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said in a special study made public Wednesday.

Tax cuts, elimination of waste in government and policies that will improve competition and produetivity, will also have the effect of arresting the spiral of inflation, the research staff said in its findings.

The report was prepared at the request of the members of the economic affairs and taxation committee of the Progressive Conservative caucus. The committee consists of Stanfield, Senator Jacques Flynn, Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) and Dr. James Gillies (PC—Don Valley).

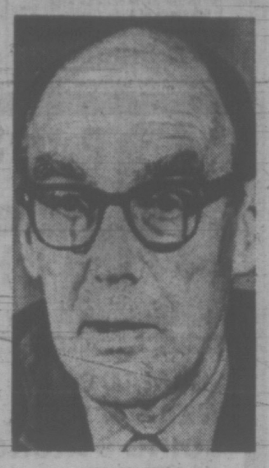

"In the past the Liberal government's policies have hindered rather than helped and there is still no indication that its ability to handle the economy has improved.

"In viewing the prospects for the Canadian economy in 1973, it is this demonstrated economic incompetence of the Trudeau government that dims our optimism," said the study.

The document, a backgrounder on the current state of the economy in advance of the federal budget, was distributed to all Conservative MPs and was made available to the parliamentary press gallery.

The recession of 1970 and subsequent sluggish economic growth — which account for the present high unemployment rates — have been largely the direct result of government policies, the study said.

The Liberal government embarked on a "senseless

STANFIELD

move towards fiscal and monetary tightness prompted by an irrespressible desire to contain inflation in December, 1969." Since then unemployment has mounted steadily.

When restraint takes the form of increased taxation it could have the effect of accelerating inflation by encouraging people to seek wage increases to compensate for the higher taxes, the research group said.

Stanfield expressed this view during the last election campaign. It has been supported since by findings of the Economic Council of Canada and by studies at the University of Toronto Institute for Policy Analysis, the study found.

It found that the Liberal government, in the interest of trying to lower inflationary pressures, embarked on policies aimed at deliberately creating higher unemployment, in 1969.

"The palatability of the government's priorities aside, the wisdom of its policies is at least dubious. Demand management policies — if applied ruthlessly enough — can restrain inflation as long as excessive demand is its cause.

"What Canada is faced with today, however, and what Canada was facing in 1969, was not a 'demand pull' inflation, but an 'income' or a 'cost-push' inflation, caused by expectations that price rises would continue. In an economy with high concentration of power in both the goods and labour markets, the impact of demand management policies to restrain an inflation of this second kind will, at best, be minimal," the research group said.

Even with unchanged nominal tax rates, under the existing tax structure, purely inflationary increases in income levels lead to higher effective tax rates and lower real disposable incomes. Taxpayers notice the reduction in their take-home pay and in their efforts to off-set the government 'rip-off' they further aggravate inflationary pressures.

"The results of the government's misguided policies, therefore could only be the ones which actually did occur: higher unemployment and higher inflation," the study found.

In 1972 Canada retained the distinction of having the highest unemployment rate in the industrialized world, it reported.

"This fact is the strongest evidence of continuing weakness of the economy and government failure in the economic policy area," the PC study paper said.

It noted that Finance Minister John Turner in his May 8, 1972 budget, predicted progress would be made in 1972-73 in reducing unemployment. These same forecasts had been made by former finance minister Edgar Benson. Instead the unemployment rate rose.

FOOD PRICE CONTROL HARD TO ACHIEVE

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner said Wednesday there is no way the government can control food prices without implementing general price guides.

He was responding in the Commons to James McGrath (PC—St. John's East), who asked whether the government has contingency plans ready to control rising food prices.

Turner said the government has contingency plans to deal with prices generally if needed, as announced previously by Prime Minister Trudeau.

"There is no selective way that food prices could be dealt with as a specific item unless under a general plan," he said.

Council Urged On Human Rights

MONTREAL (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield advocates formation of a national human rights commission to reinforce and protect the every-day rights of Canadians.

In a speech Wednesday night to the brotherhood dinner of the Temple Emmanu-El, Mr. Stanfield said such a commission is one of the measures the federal government can and must adopt to protect individuals and to protect the good name of the whole country."

He referred to the Bill of Rights introduced by his predecessor, John Diefenbaker, as "a milestone in human right legislation." The Canada Labor Code and the Fair Employment Practices Act were other examples of legislation designed to protect human rights. But such measures did not go far enough.

"We should set up an independent nationall human rights commission to deal with the whole range of individual rights in every field, be it labor, housing, the status of women or any other, insofar as these come under the jurisdiction of the federal government."

Mr. Stanfield said the commission should not rival the courts, but its moral force from publicity, through reports to the Commons, and its administrative decisions could lend it considerable influence.

"It would seem to have an obvious role in dealing with questions of discrimination that arise concerning hiring and promotion practices, not only within that part of the private sector that comes under federal jurisdiction, but also within the federal public service."

Mr. Stanfield also called for a federal-provincial conference to deal with fair employment practices.

"I am convinced that there must be a national minimum standard in this field."

Text of Mr. Stanfield's speech was released in advance of delivery.

Soviet, U.S. Ships Combine In Forecasting

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet weather ship Priboi has arrived near St. Matthew's Island in the Bering Sea to take part in the first Soviet-American experiment on forecasting polar weather, the news agency Tass reported Wednesday.

The six-week mission was made possible by agreements on scientific co-operation signed by U.S. President Nixon in Moscow last May.

The Priboi and a specially-equipped Ilyushin 18 airplane will be in constant radio contact with the U.S. Coast Guard icebreaker Staten Island and an American aircraft.

Starting today, the two planes will criss-cross the Arctic, scanning the polar cap with microwaves.

Firearms Act Debated

By PAUL JACKSON
Times Ottawa Bureaau

OTTAWA — Senator Donald Cameron told the Senate Wednesday that many Canadians have let their sense of compassion completely run away with their common sense.

The Alberta senator made the comment during second reading of his act to tighten control of weapons and firearms.

Sen. Cameron, an independent Liberal, said Canada's increasingly permissive society is producing a generation of irresponsible people and that because of the abuse of the parole system in this country dangerous criminals are being turned loose on society.

He said his bill would help to keep firearms out of the hands of those who are a threat to society — it would in no way legislate the legitimate firearms of sportsmen out of existence.

Sen. Cameron spoke vigorously of the connection between drugs and crime.

He said the rise of the drug culture had produced tremendous demands for money to enable addicts to pay for their supplies

"In the district in which I live hardly a week goes by but what homes are broken into and ransacked by people searching for money to buy drugs. I can speak with feeling here because my home has been broken into five times in the last four years."

Sen. Cameron said it is bad enough having your home broken into but it is even more dangerous when the ransackers are persons on drugs "who lose control of any senses that they might have had and, when cornered, become very dangerous.

Pornography 'The Right to Choose'

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's Anglican Church leader has denounced censorship laws.

"You can't legislate moral behavior," said Archbishop Edward Scott.

"It ceases to be moral when it's imposed. You have to have the right to choose."

He was speaking to about 500 attending a forum on film censorship.

"I personally would opt for a society of maximum personal freedom . . . an open context with a sense of responsibility," the Anglican primate said.

"What can you actually achieve by censorship? A wall to protect people? If you can get them to face a closed wall, you haven't trained them to live with reality."

Of the six panelists, only a Crown prosecutor defended Ontario's existing censorship system.

Even John Clement, the minister responsible for film censorship in the province, agreed with a recent study group report calling for censorship abolition and establishment instead of a four-part rating system patterened after those in Manitoba and the United States.

"With this I personally can find no disagreement," said Clement, minister of consumer and commercial relations.

He hinted the province may soon scrap the snip-and-cut system of the Ontario board of censors in favor of a movie-rating code placing various restriction on young viewers.

"We're looking at the legislation now," Clement said. "But I don't see how I can tell what you are entitled to see."

His statements prompted Aubrey Golden, a defence lawyer in a number of film obscenity cases, to remark of The Last Tango: "We can assume . . . it won't be cut — it'll be prosecuted."

The Last Tango stars Marlon Brando and shows a variety of sexual experiences. It was acquitted of obscenity charges in Italy last month and is expected to be shown in Toronto this spring or summer.

Another panelist, John Bassett, film producer and head of the provincial study group on films, said no agency but the courts has the right to tell writers, directors or film producers what they should or should not be able to say. Golden said the middle class is able to persecute lower classes by censoring pornography.

He described this process as "aesthetic persecution" and said he had learned of it from acting as defence counsel at obscenity trials. Most middle-class people, aspiring to upper-class tastes, are deeply concerned with defining "literary merit."

"The lower classes don't want to wade through 20 minutes of deathless prose for their porn — and they're entitled to it," he said.

Lewis to Visit Jailed Union Chiefs

OTTAWA — New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis plans a visit Friday to three Quebec labor leaders imprisoned for activities connected with common-front strikes in the province last year.

His office announced Wednesday night that Lewis would go to Quebec City Friday and visit Orsainville Jail to see Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau.

The three went into jail last week after failure of an attempt to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada against their convictions last May for contempt of court.

BELASQUES
. . . onion advocate

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — When the state called its first witness in the circuit court case against 22-year-old Marvin Holloman, Rufus Stokes, the elderly victim of the crime, stepped forward. He testified that Holloman held a knife at his throat and robbed him.

"Is the man who robbed you in the courtroom?" asked Assistant State Attorney Harry Gulkins.

Stokes said, "Yes," fixed his eyes on the jury box and pointed to juror No. 3, a middle-aged man with spectacles who bore no resemblance to the youthful defendant.

"That's him," said Stokes.

"The state rests," sighed Prosecutor Gulkins.

"Case dismissed," said the judge.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — An onion a day keeps 92-year-old Ricardo (Basco) Belasques fit for his eight-hour stint at a steel mill.

"I love to work, so why should I retire?" he asked after a shift of grabbing and sorting 20-pound steel bars as they come out of a machine.

Belasques, who will be 93 in April, has been working at the Bethlehem Corp. plant for 30 years. Asked the secret of his energy, Belasques — who came to this country from Spain and speaks no English — said through an interpreter:

"Well, I eat a whole onion every day. Every day of the year."

Then he added that once in a while he takes a shot of whisky after work.

LONDON — Cooking authority Julia Child appeared on British television and some viewers thought she was tipsy.

"I believe in having fun in the kitchen and being informal," Mrs. Child said after her British television debut on the BBC network. "If people thought I was drunk they were wrong. But I'm pleased to know they were wondering." Mrs. Child dropped or knocked over some of her kitchen equipment, cracked jokes and wreaked her usual havoc in teaching people how to cook.

LOS ANGELES — A lawsuit against Communist activist Angela Davis, aimed at preventing her from going back to UCLA as a philosophy professor, was dismissed Wednesday.

The judge ruled the suit was moot, on the grounds that the University of California board of regents has already made it clear that Miss Davis stands no chance of ever being rehired. Miss Davis, who stood trial for murder in the Marin County courthouse shootings, was originally fired in 1969 for being a Communist. A court ruled the dismissal was unconstitutional, and the board of regents then refused to renew her contract, on the grounds her radical activities off campus disqualified her as a faculty member.

AIELLO DEL FRIULI, Italy — Frank "Three Fingers" Coppola, a one-time reputed underworld leader in Kansas City, settled down today to four years of exile in this remote village near the Yugoslav border.

Coppola, 73, arrived Wednesday with his nephew Pino, checked in at the only hotel in the area and immediately was visited by police officials. He later paid a call on the mayor. A small crowd turned out to see the arrival of the new resident celebrity. Coppola, deported from the United States in 1948 as "undesirable," is one of 114 persons awaiting trial as alleged members of the so-called New Mafia, which officials say is led by Sicilian Gerlando Alberti.

CAIRO — Sheikh Mohammed El-Fahham, Egypt's Moslem religious leader ruled Wednesday that women are not qualified to serve as assistants to the public prosecutor.

The ruling followed an earlier one saying that women were not fit to serve as judges, the Middle East News Agency said. Fahham did not explain his ruling.

NEW YORK — Mrs. Marion McAllister, wife of a subway yardmaster and mother of a 15-year-old daughter, is the first woman to qualify for training as a subway motorman.

"I'm a bit nervous. I'll just have to try to do my best and see what happens," Mrs. McAllister said Wednesday as she reported for her first day of classes.

Mrs. McAllister said she decided to take the motorman's test because "I wanted to learn more about the system and see just what knowledge I had about the railroad." She finished 19th in a field of 1,084. Only 259 passed the exam last April.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Our deepest gratitude and thanks to relatives, friends, neighbors for their cards, messages, flowers and donations to the Cancer Research Society, in the loss of our dearly beloved husband, father and grandfather, E. John Dyer. Many thanks to Dr. Lockyer, Mrs. Sullivan and staff; also to Dr. J. A. Fowler and Mrs. Johnson. Special thanks to the Nurses, Orderlies and Staff on 2A — Victoria General Hospital, for their kindness to all of us. Thanks to Rev. Molloy, whose words were a comfort, and also to B.C. Memorial Society. Many thanks to Mr. and Mrs. M. Gallo, Bea Hives, and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Rath for their help and kindness. Also our Bowling Leagues — Northridge and The Trio Half Century.—Hazel Dyer, Ken and Pat Dyer and children.

The gratitude in our hearts can never be fully expressed, but we want our friends, relatives and neighbours to know how much their kind words, expressions of sympathy and beautiful floral tributes have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of our beloved Son and Brother Durwood (Woody) Friedrich. Special thanks to Pastor R. E. Koch, Peace Lutheran Church, Sidney. Ever grateful— Mr. and Mrs. Tony Friedrich and sons Lamont and Shaun.

9 IN MEMORIAM

ROBERTSON — Mary E., in loving memory of a dear Mother and Grandmother, who passed away February 15, 1972.
In our home She is fondly remembered,
Sweet memories cling to her name;
Those who loved her in life sincerely
Still love her in death just the same.
—Sadly missed by her daughter Darlyne, son-in-law Bernie and grandchildren Gayle, Kim and David.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.
PSALM 23.

With the present turnover of sales people in Victoria, good realtors should insure themselves against falling into the "Ex Realtor" category. May I offer some suggestions:
(a) Work twice as hard as you have been.
(b) Hope for more than your share of office leads.
(c) Ask for a raise in pay.
(d) Forget a, b, and c and move to DOUGLAS REALTY, we pay up to 90 per cent in easy progressive stages. Inquire in confidence for all the facts.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Gift of a Half-a-Lifetime

A child born today in the United States can expect to live some 22 years longer than his grandparents did . . . that is a gain of half a lifetime, added since 1900.

Why is it that people are living so much longer, and why is it that during the Middle Ages, people usually lived only about 40 years? One reason is that the average living standard has been greatly improved; also, in the past 50 years, water supplies have been made freer from the bad germs that often produced diarrhea, cholera or typhoid fever.

When I was a boy in Hawaii, some 80 years ago, I lived in a nice big house, but we had only an outside toilet, from which bad germs could easily run a few yards into the spring which gave us our water. As a result, one member of the family nearly died of typhoid fever.

Because we had no penicillin, my father almost died of pneumonia in 1893, and because we had no antitoxin for diphtheria, my mother and I almost died in 1887.

Until 1921, when insulin was discovered, practically all young persons who got diabetes died in six months or so. Years ago, when I was a boy, many people died of consumption (as tuberculosis was then called).

Another cause of death was childbirth. Before antiseptic medicine was discovered in the late 19th century, midwives would deliver babies without first even washing their hands, and many a woman died as a result. Also, many babies died within the first few days of life, without proper care.

Unfortunately, we still have much trouble with influenza! pneumonia, heart disease, cancer, high blood pressure, big strokes and little strokes.

Today, heart disease is the number one killer, and the AMA says that heart disease claims 358 lives each year for every 100,000 Americans, while the annual death rate for cancer, the second-ranking killer, is 161 per 100,000 Americans.

In 1900, 137 Americans per 100,000 died of heart disease each year, and 64 Americans per 100,000 died of cancer.

During the last few years we have seen polio almost wiped out, and before that we saw malaria, typhoid fever and diphtheria almost wiped out. Today surgeons have been learning to save the lives of many people with heart and kidney diseases. Also, medicines have been found which will lower a high blood pressure, which is a common cause of death.

This is one of the best locations and potentials in town. Property has 2 lots with 791 feet on 2 roads. Fast food take out, plus eat in, plus recreational concessions really draw the public. This spot is absolutely jammed during sunny weather. During off season months you still can sell all the burgers, chips, shakes and pies you could turn out. Owner must sell for health reasons. It is not impossible to make $30,000 year to the right operator. Owner will accept house, revenue property, mortgages or land as part payment, or will sell as low as $20,000 down. Phone for all details on this terrific potential. Only 2 owners in 10 years!! Lots of room to expand.

MURDER FAMILY AFFAIR

By STEPHEN SCOTT

Surprisingly few Canadian murders are committed as a part of another criminal activity. In fact there sometimes are more arguments settled with a gun than criminal acts completed.

The figures show that of the 425 murders reported by police in 1971, the last complete year available, 193 were the result of shooting.

Eighty-two were the result of beating, 67 the result of stabbing, 29 strangling, six suffocating, six drowning, 10 arson, 29 the result of other means of killing and three the result of unknown causes.

The statistics show that those proportions hold about true for the years dating back to 1967. The exception was 1970 when 40 persons died in a deliberately set fire in Quebec.

KILLED RELATIVES

Of those 425 murders in 1971, a total of 150 were classified as domestic. That is, the victims were members of the killer's immediate family or related in some other way or were partners in a common-law relationship.

A total of 169 were classified as "others." That takes in a variety of killings including those following excessive drinking—27 in 1971—and those immediately following an argument—49. Other "others" could be gangland killings—five—and cases of jealousy.

The statistics bureau gives these percentages for the years 1967 to 1971:

Domestic murders: 43.6 per cent of a total of 282 murders in 1967; 37.6 per cent of 315 in 1968; 37.6 per cent of 346 in 1969; 32.2 per cent of 432 in 1970; 35.3 per cent of 425 in 1971.

During commission of a criminal act, such as robbery, rape and arson: 9.9 per cent with 28 victims in 1967; 13.3 per cent with 42 victims in 1968; 9.8 per cent with 34 victims in 1969; 20.6 per cent with 89 victims in 1970 and 10.1 per cent with 43 victims in 1971.

In the period 1961-1971 there were 2,778 murder incidents reported involving 3,099 victims.

These and other statistics have become available as Parliament considers whether to extend capital punishment or to continue to ban it, except for the murder of police officers and prison guards.

At the same time recent murders of Toronto policemen have spurred renewed talk of gun control laws.

More Drug Charges

COQUITLAM (CP) — Five persons were arrested on drug charges here Wednesday. A youth was charged with possession of MDA and marijuana. Two people were charged with possession of marijuana for the purposes of trafficking and two others were charged with possession of marijuana. Weekend raids resulted in 15 arrests in Port Coquitlam.

Que. Cabinet Juggled

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa shuffled his cabinet Wednesday in what was described as a move to stress the government's commitment to improve the quality of life in Quebec.

The two major changes see Victor Goldbloom become municipal affairs minister while remaining minister responsible for environment; and Francois Cloutier take over the cultural affairs portfolio while retaining education.

Claire Kirland-Casgrain, who succeeded Cloutier in cultural affairs after he was named education minister a year ago, announced her retirement.

Other cabinet changes:

● Paul Phaneuf, becomes minister without portfolio responsible for youth, recreation and sports.

● Maurice Tessier moves from municipal affairs to public works.

● Oswald Parent becomes minister of the public service but retains his post as minister without portfolio with responsibility for intergovernmental affairs and finance.

● Robert Quenneville, minister without portfolio responsible for the Office of Development of Eastern Quebec, is given additional responsibility for "the preparation and application" of Local Initiative Opportunities for Youth projects.

● Georges Vaillancourt was named minister without portfolio, with some responsibility for municipal affairs at the regional level.

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — America's Roman Catholic bishops have issued a pastoral message containing unprecedented advice for disobedience of "any civil law that may require abortion" and pronouncing excommunication on any Catholic who "undergo or perform an abortion."

The message to the faithful, issued for Tuesday for the U.S. hierarchy by the administrative committee of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, called the recent supreme court ruling striking down most state laws baring abortions "wrong and entirely contary to the fundamental principles of morality."

Reasoning that "our American law and way of life comprise an obvious and certain recognition of the law of God, and that our legal system is both based on it, and must conform to it," the bishops' statement condones civil disobedience because "we reject the opinion of the U.S. supreme court as errneus, unjust and immoral."

A quick check of the recent history of American Catholicism disclosed no other situation inwhich the hierarchy, generally strongly on the side of law and order, has found sufficent moral reason to council breaking the law.

In a press conference called to release the pastoral message, Msgr. James T. McHugh, director of the U.S. Catholic conference's family life division said the councel to disobey "any civil law that may require abortion," applied primarily to medical personnel.

He said that the Wisconsin legislature was considering a law which could threaten the licensure of a doctor or nurse who refused to perform an abortion.

Msgr. McHugh sand there was also concern that the supreme court decision would increase pressures on women to have abortions.

"We very seriously fear that people receiving public assistance will be the first ones coerced into having abortions," he said.

2 Injured In Colwood

Two motorists suffered minor injuries in a collision at 8:45 a.m. today in Colwood which involved four vehicles.

The mishap occurred on Highway 1A near Prince Robert Drive.

Colwood police said Stephen J. Nagy of 2780 Spencer was travelling north when his auto collided with three southbound vehicles. Nagy suffered minor chest injuries.

The driver of one of the other cars, Sharon Quayle, 20, of 642 Raylor, received minor cuts and bruises and was taken to hospital.

The other two cars were driven by Marion Mayhew, 22, of 2250 Marlene Drive, and Ernest Beadle, 29, of 1470 Dallas.

UVic Senate Studies Mid-Term Admitting

University of Victoria senate will look into ways of admitting full-time students in January as well as September.

The Senate Wednesday asked Dr. D. J. MacLaurin, dean of academic affairs, to form a committee to examine the possibility.

It was responding to an urgent request by Mrs. Elizabeth Kennedy, who presented the report of the committee on entrance requirements and standards to senate.

Starting in January, 1974, high school students will be able to write scholarship exams in January as well as June, Mrs. Kennedy said. The current estimate is that one-third of students writing scholarship exams will be doing it in January, she said.

She urged senate to make some provision for enrolling these students, many of whom will be the brighter high school students.

"A possible solution is a semester system, but there are other solutions as well," said Mrs. Kennedy.

In other business, senate:

—Rescinded a decision made last September that students not be permitted to register at UVic and Camosun College at the same time. This will now be possible if the student has permission from his dean.

—Accepted the recommendation of an ad hoc committee that the department of history in art remain in the fine arts faculty and not move to the faculty of arts and sciences, as requested unanimously by faculty in the department.

The committee said the transfer should wait until programs of study in the department are "reasonably stabilized". At the moment the department is undergoing a major revision of its programs, said committee chairman Mrs. Kennedy.

PPWC to Delay Certification Bid

PORT ALBERNI — Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada have not applied for certification at the Alberni Pacific Division sawmill here.

With the deadline to bid for bargaining rights up today, the PPWC will be challenging the International Woodworkers of America here only for the right to represent 1,060 workers at MacMillan Bloedel's Somass Division, a sawmill and adjacent shingle mill.

PPWC president Fred Mullin said today the union didn't have enough time to organize the Alberni Pacific Division's 640 workers before the deadline.

"We were asked in (to the mill) but we were asked in at a late date," Mullin said. He said the PPWC is confident it will be applying for certification for the mill next December.

Mullin said he was very hopeful that the B.C. Labor Relations Board will give certification at Somass to the PPWC and not the IWA, which holds bargaining rights at both mills now.

"All we're looking for is a vote," he said...

The Labor Relations Board can approve the application, reject it, call a hearing of the parties involved or order a representation vote. Its decision will probably not be announced for a month or more.

The PPWC has also applied for certification for the 120-employee Ladysmith Forest Products sawmill, which is now an IWA stronghold.

Cars Crash, Three Hurt

Three persons were injured and $2,000 damage done in a two-car collision on Cadboro Bay Road Wednesday evening.

Driver David Stone Sutton, 943 Hampshire, was northbound on Cadboro Bay when in collision with a car driven by Vaughan Alexander Dickson, 2096 Avondale. The 5 p.m. crash occurred at the intersection of Cardigan and Cadboro Bay.

Both drivers and a passenger in the Dickson vehicle were treated in hospital and later released.

STUDIO WINGS CLIPPED

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council Tuesday night approved a three-month business licence for Fiesta Dance Studios.

The licence is to be reviewed in three months and the firm is not to issue any contracts or accept prepayments for dance lessons under its terms.

The decision was taken on the recommendation of Vince Forbes of the Better Business Bureau. Dance studios have been criticized recently for involving potential students in long-term contracts for costly lessons.

MD Inquiry Continues

A closed-door inquiry by the British Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons under Section 49 of the Medical Act into the professional conduct of former Victoria doctor John G. Patterson went into its third day today.

Wednesday the three-doctor examining panel held three sittings, morning, afternoon and evening. The college is considering 31 separate points related to Patterson's conduct.

When practising in Victoria, up to June of 1972, Patterson was involved with a controversial methadone substitution program for heroin addicts.

Port Dispute Halts Work At Sukunka

VANCOUVER (CP) — An acrimonious dispute between the federal and provincial governments has halted development of the big Sukunka coal mining property in northern British Columbia.

Cliff Sawyer, general manager of Coalition Mining Ltd., announced Wednesday that the company has laid off 28, more than half its work force of 50 at the mine site near Chetwynd, and suspended a Vancouver contract for supply of a coal-cleaning plant until the federal and B.C. governments resolve their dispute over the site for a port to handle coal shipments.

Coalition was to have made a decision Jan. 31 on whether to put the Sukunka property into full production.

"We have suspended the decision until we get clarification on the seaport that will be used," Sawyer said in an interview.

"Until it is resolved, we have to cut back on our expenses. There was no way we could go on investing money against a background of such uncertainty."

In August, former premier Bennett announced that the provincially-owned B.C. Railway had negotiated a 20-year contract with Coalition to carry coal some 420 miles southward to a port at Squamish.

Since the election of the New Democratic Party government in the Aug. 30 provincial election, the site of the post has been changed to Britannia, five miles south of Squamish.

MP Fined $250 by Court

RICHMOND (CP) — Paddy Neale, NDP MP for Vancouver East, was fined $250 Wednesday and prohibited from driving for one month after being found guilty of failing to submit to a breath analysis test.

The sentence was imposed by Richmond provincial Judge R. W. Greig, who found Neale guilty at a trial Dec. 7, when Neale was acquitted of a charge of impaired driving.

The charges were laid after Neale was stopped in a police speed trap in this Vancouver suburb last Aug. 26.

New Type of Garden Club . . . For Apartments Only!

The time is just about right for a new kind of garden club to blossom in Victoria. Just because gardeners give up their conventional homes and gardens for apartments and condominiums is not proof that gardening interest is decreasing in this area.

In October 1968 issue of Horticulture Magazine (Boston, Mass.) mention appeared of a garden club of apartment dwellers who grow plants on terraces. No one was eligible unless living above the 13th floor!

Smaller areas of ground suite owners of condominiums, and small plots for tenants' use are found at garden court apartments.

In some instances, the changeover from conventional garden to smaller area creates problems simply of limitation. What should be chosen for best results in such a small garden?

In other cases, especially with condominium dwellings, the problem crops up of one owner's plant choice not being acceptable to another owner whose view includes the planting efforts of owner number one.

As an interested onlooker, I feel that any group of owners or tenants which meets for discussion of garden development plans, needs a moderator or chairman not concerned with that particular building complex.

Yet he or she should be a resident of a similar type of dwelling complex in order to have a realistic view of the problems.

Also a knowledge of local weather, soil and plants would be of assistance in guiding or prodding the activities of new owner or tenant gardeners.

Conditions are quite different for example on Dallas Road waterfront to those which surrounded a former garden in mid-Fairfield or outer Saanich.

A secluded sunny garden corner on the grounds of a Mount Tolmie condominium is capable of supporting almost tropical beauty in contrast to the more austere shade and wind experienced in another complex on Burnside Road.

Nor should the growing of food plants be neglected or scorned, or even frowned upon by any tenant or owner of an apartment.

All of us must eat. Some of us like to eat food which we see growing. One small garden of herb plants soon became a popular spot in one apartment block, as the gardener-tenant showed willingness to share the tasty green morsels.

Soon, others were growing a patch of bright green chive plants, allowing a few to flower for color. Another took over production of small head lettuce, maintaining a full plot by succession sowings. As a side benefit, these folks became aware of the need for growing healthy plants and avoiding use of harmful sprays and dusts.

With a club planning each season's activities, there need be no limits — flower arrangers would have flowers and foliage, and salad eaters their makings. Is it just a wild idea, or has it possibilities?

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

There is an old bridge adage which says that, at a trump contract, a defender should never lead a suit that both declarer and dummy are known to be void of. In the vernacular, one should never give declarer a "sluff and a ruff," thus enabling him to trump the trick in one hand, while simultaneously discarding a loser from the other hand.

But all rules and adages have their exceptions, as will be observed in today's deal. The hand came up in a rubber-bridge game.

East-West vulnerable. East deals.

♣ K

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Six of ◇.

After winning the opening lead with his diamond queen, East cashed the ace of diamonds. The only diamonds remaining in the deck were now possessed by East. He next took a time out to deliberate about what to lead to trick three.

To lead a club, in view of the dummy, had to be wrong. Either South had the king, or West had it. And if it were West, then a club lead would ambush the king, and result in his decapitation. So West eliminated the club lead.

To lead a low heart might turn out well if West possessed the king of hearts. In this case, the king would drive out dummy's ace, and would promote East's queen into a winner. But East felt, on the bidding, that South possessed the heart king. So he eliminated the heart lead.

By a process of elimination, East therefore came to the conclusion that the defenders' best chance was for him to lead a diamond, despite the fact that North, South, and West were known to have no more diamonds. How right he was!

When East led the diamond king to trick three, he doomed declarer to defeat. If South trumped low, West would overtrump with the trump ten. And if South ruffed with the spade jack (as he did), West would discard a heart or a club. And with the A-10-3 of spades remaining, West could not be prevented from winning two trump tricks.

Had East led either a heart or a club at trick three, declarer would have fulfilled his contract. He would have won East's lead, and played the king of trumps, driving out West's ace. Upon regaining the lead, declarer would have cashed the queen and jack of trumps, picking up West's two remaining pieces.

NOISE BOWLS RIVALS OVER

CONINGSBY, England (CP) — One by one, clubs in a Lincolnshire bowling league discovered the key to one village team's success. Situated on the edge of a noisy air force station, the club's bowlers had grown accustomed to the roar of aircraft engines. But the din shattered all opponents. "The station now has installed soudproofing," club secretary Harry Brain says. "This will ruin our position in the league."

B.C. May Give Addicts Heroin

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi told a crowd of concerned citizens Wednesday night that eventually the government may simply have to give drugs to addicts.

More than 500 people were gathered in Vic High auditorium to discuss, in an open forum, Victoria's growing drug problem.

They listened to the problems, frustrations and sad testimonials of more than 30 people.

They heard few solutions.

Levi told them the problem "rests squarely" on the provincial government and they were prepared to be "pretty adventuresome" in trying to find a solution.

"We need to try a number of different ways," he said.

"But in my opinion, not many people can get off it — if they're on hard stuff.

"In the long haul we may just have to accept we're going to have to give them the drug . . . it would be less costly and more humane."

He told the meeting a government policy position on drugs was being worked out and would come before the house during this session.

He suggested a drug dependence commission, with some kind of full time staff, may be appointed.

The floor was opened for the public to bring forth their experiences and their ideas for dealing with drug addiction and people were soon queuing up in front of the microphone.

Most who spoke were soon carried away with their own stories and could offer only vague solutions, while moderator Peter Lesoway, president of the Canadian Concerned Citizens group, kept calling for constructive ideas.

Several drug addicts and former drug users spoke and most said they couldn't explain why they had turned to drugs.

"If I had to put my finger on it I'd say it was lack of anything else to do," one young heroin addict explained, and many seemed to agree with him.

One concrete solution was offered by Dr. Jim Lang, Victoria director of the Narcotics Addiction Foundation, who said he hoped to start a house for those fighting drug addiction and eventually to acquire a farm outside the community.

"We must pressure the government to take drugs out of the criminal area and into the mental health area," Lang said.

The idea of drug addiction as a medical problem was stressed through out the evening, especially by Oak Bay MLA Dr. Scott Wallace who sat on the platform.

Wallace said his generation had looked unsympathetically on self-inflicted sicknesses such as drug addiction.

But drugs should be looked on as a mental health problem which lead to physical

What's Wrong With Addicts?

By WILLIAM RASPBERRY
(A commentary by a Washington Post columnist.)

There is one piece of the drug-abuse puzzle that hardly anybody wants to handle. It's almost as though we forget that it's there.

That is the question: What is wrong with drug addicts?

Not after they're hooked — everybody knows then what's wrong. I mean, what is wrong with a person that makes him, with full knowledge of what heroin can do, want to shoot up anyway? The first time.

If we could answer that question, and do something about it, we could dismantle the bureau of narcotics and dangerous drugs and send its agents someplace where their services really are needed — to one of the big pharmaceutical houses, for instance.

There would be no need for strongarm agreements with Turkey, where the opium poppy flourishes, or France, where it is processed; no reason for so many customs people searching for (or maybe being bribed not to search for) smuggled narcotics; no incredibly lucrative mainstay for organized crime, and considerably less compulsion for the dope-inspired unorganized crime.

All it would take is for the poor schnook on the street to say: No, thanks.

It is extremely doubtful that any anti-drug program will work. Everybody knows that, of course. But when we are confronted with a massive problem, there is the almost irresistible temptation to try massive solutions.

We trick outselves into looking for kingpins and keystones — those few central figures who, if they were removed, would topple the entire structure.

So we threaten to halt foreign aid to Turkey; we raise the penalties for smuggling; we propose (as did New York's Gov. Rockefeller) automatic life sentences for every penny-ante pusher; we keep adding men — and money for anti-drug law enforcement.

Occasionally, there is a payoff for all this investment of pressure, time and money — for instance, the recent bust that, according to the papers, cut off a fourth of the illicit drugs that had been reaching

EIGHT TONS OF POT are unloaded from a Mexican freighter in Los Angeles in what U.S. customs officers called the largest marijuana seizure ever in the U.S. Some 7,000 one-kilo bricks of the drug were found in boxes labelled "coffee." The largest previous seizure was five tons of marijuana.

Viet Guards Harassing Observers

Times News Services

The Polish and Hungarian delegations to the International Commission for Control and Supervision are threatening to move their troops out of the commission's compound at the base.

The Hungarians object strongly to having to pass through the guard posts of another nation.

"I try to hang as much shoulder out of the window as possible every time I go past that guard point so they'll see the gold bars, said a Canadian colonel, "but it doesn't always work."

Indonesia is the other member of the four-nation supervisory commission.

Meanwhile, two North Vietnamese representatives of the Joint Military Commission ran into trouble today in Hue, where a dozen South Vietnamese surrounded their car, beat on it with bamboo sticks and wet one of the men with some sort of liquid thrown into the car. The asssilants backed away when an escort of South Vietnamese MPs got out of their car. The North Vietnamese were not hurt.

In Washington, meanwhile, President Nixon's plans to help reconstruct North Vietnam are in serious trouble in Congress, despite the agreement on a postwar economic program between the U.S. and its foe in almost a decade of war.

Foreign aid experts in congress said the program was a probable casualty of this session no matter how carefully the administration tailors it to meet the legislators' objections.

The amount of aid is considered to be the least of the obstacles. Early indications are that the $7.5 billion, five-year figure for both North and South Vietnam will be sharply pared before it is submitted to congress.

Most important is the decision whether the reconstruction money will be funneled directly from Washington to Hanoi and Saigon, or handled and administered by an international agency such as the Asian Development Bank or the United Nations.

In Hanoi the government radio charged today the United States was building up an undercover force in Vietnam of up to 10,000 civilians.

Although top U.S. officials are keeping its size a top secret, guesses are that the expeditionary corps of military disguised as civilians will run between 6,000 and 10,000 men," the radio said.

"Who are these civilians? In theory they are specialists in the maintenance of U.S. military equipment that has been turned over to the South Vietnamese armed forces, performing their work under various contracts with the Pentagon . . .

"But in reality they are substitutes for the former military asistance command and advisory corps . . . The formation of the expeditionary corps is in violation of articles 8A and 8B of the Paris treaty ending the war and restoring peace in Vietnam."

$269,866 CALENDAR

OTTAWA (CP) — It cost the public $269,866 for 800,000 1973 calendars sent out free by the post office, the Commons was told Wednesday.

Only the cost of production by Metropole Litho Inc. of Montreal was shown. One edition was revised after "some errors" were found. The calendars gave February three extra days.

Distribution to the general public and the business community was made through post offices.

Pilots' Walkout Tonight

British Columbia pilots will stop work at midnight tonight following a breakdown of wage negotiations with Pacific Pilotage Authority.

Thirty pilots stationed in Victoria will be affected by the work stoppage which will bring almost a complete closure of deepsea activity in B.C. ports.

All shipping companies have been notified of the pending work stoppage. About five deepsea vessels are expected in B.C. waters by Saturday and more than 40 in the next two weeks.

Stanley Clarke, chairman of the Pacific Pilotage Authority said that "negotiations now have come to an end as a result of the exorbitant demands of 'British Columbia Coast Pilots Ltd."

Clarke said that althugh claiming not to be primarily concerned with monetary demands, the company has in fact insisted on a final settlement package which would cost the authority approximately 30 per cent more for pilots' service in the first year.

$ Shockwaves Spread, 3 Currencies Devalued

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Shockwaves of the U.S. dollar devaluation spread today and three more European countries devalued their currencies. Pandemonium hit the London gold market and the price of gold soared again to a new all-time high.

Finland and Sweden devalued their currencies by five per cent. The Portuguese escudo dropped 3.5 per cent by government decree. Scores of other nations revalued their currencies upward. The dollar was weak in Asia, especially on the Tokyo money market.

On the Lodnon bullion market a flood of Asian buy orders shot up the price of gold $1.15 to a new peak of $73.62 an ounce.

The rise followed a record breaking $3 jump Wednesday.

The flood of orders showed little sign of tapering off and the new price effectively jumped gold's value against the dollar by 1 per cent since the eruption of the crisis three weeks ago.

The dollar improved slightly in Britain, however, where banks were exchanging pounds for $2.465 against $2.47 Wednesday.

In Zurich, the dollar lost ground again, changing hands at 3.355 Swiss francs for each dollar versus 3.377 Wednesday. This represented an effective 14 per cent increase in the value of the Franc against the dollar.

Denmark and Norway said their currencies would hold their value.

Spain's markets remained closed, but the Bank of Spain continued to allow tourists to change $50 at the pre-devaluation rate of 63 pesetas.

The nine members of the European Common Market said today President Nixon's decision to devalue the dollar by 10 per cent would contribute to resolving world balance of payments problems. But they said his action would not stop them from going ahead with work on a worldwide monetary overhaul.

In Brussels, at the end of a five-hour meeting to discuss post-devaluation strategy, Common Market finance ministers said splits and divisions within the huge trade bloc would not keep them from moving toward economic unity.

They also ignored threats of trade reprisals from the

No More Navy Whiskers

The defence department has clipped its two-year-old regulation allowing members of the forces to grow beards.

As of Feb. 8 commanding officers are no longer able to grant permission for their men to raise whiskers, a Maritime Command spokesman said today.

No explanation for the order has arrived yet from Ottawa and the status of many existing beards is uncertain.

The spokesman said there had been speculation that men with beards may be allowed to keep them, provided they never shave again.

Meanwhile, the sea element of the forces appears to be in line for another crushing blow to tradition — the removal of naval officers' rank structure, which has been under consideration for some time.

There is nothing official yet, the command spokesman said, but he expected it to happen this year.

The use of ranks such as lieutenant-commander, commander and commodore had been permitted for sea duty even though all other Canadian officers had been assigned military titles, including air force officers.

Ottawa also reports all reserve forces would be issued green berets as standard issue by the end of 1973, along with the standard green uniform. Highland units will retain the kilt.

Heath To Fight

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Edward Heath headed into a showdown with Britain's labor unions today over his pledge to preserve tight anti-inflation curbs on pay and prices.

British political commentators reported growing speculation he is ready to carry the fight to the nation itself in an early parliamentary general election on the issue: "Who runs Britain — the labor unions or the government?"

Heath drew the battle lines in a two-hour confrontation at his No. 10 Downing St. office Wednesday with the general council of the Trades Union Congress which represents 10 million British workers.

He said afterwards that he told the union leaders his government is determined to win the war against inflation. He ruled out any exceptions to the tough pay curbs it has laid down.

"We are determined to win the war against inflation. That is the government's policy. I believe it's the national policy and I'm absolutely con-

SHANGHAI BIGGEST CITY

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Shanghai has moved ahead of Tokyo and New York to become the world's biggest city with a population of 10.8 million, the U.N. demographic yearbook reports.

The 816-page report also included for the first time data on abortion.

The survey also disclosed such facts as that in seven countries, men have a longer life expectancy than women, that the lifespan in some nations is only 25 and that the New York borough of Manhattan has a population density of nearly 68,000 persons per square mile.

For the first time, the yearbook contains data from China, which was admitted to the United Nations in October, 1971.

B.C. Bans the Strap in Schools

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The day of the strap is over in British Columbia's schools, Education Minister Eileen Dailly told the legislature Wednesday.

By order-in-council on Friday, the provincial government will ban all corporal punishment in the province's public schools and amend the Public Schools Act regulations to stipulate that the discipline enforced "shall be similar to that of a kind, firm and judicious parent," she said.

Dailly said as minister of education she cannot in all conscience preside over a school system which condones and permits the use of corporal punishment.

"Surely, if we want to reduce acts of violence in our community and in the world we must eliminate acts of violence in our schools," she said. "If we want to develop future generations into more human people we must practise humanity ourselves."

Speaking in the budget debate, the education minister made several other major policy announcements, including:

—Institution in 1974 of a set spring vacation at the end of March, so that the holiday will not be inflexibly ties to Easter.

—An assurance that federal funds provided for French language instruction will be reserved exclusively for that purpose and not — as she said they had been under the Social Credit government — absorbed into general revenue.

—A system to enable adults who have not graduated from secondary school to qualify for "senior secondary school equivalency diplomas," so that they are not barred from job promotions or new employment or training opportunities.

—Expansion of family living and sex education programs throughout the public schools system.

—Creation of the post of Director of Indian Education in the department's special services division. A native Indian will be appointed to this permanent position in April, charged with studying ways of improving educational opportunities for Indian children and making the curriculum "more relevant" to their needs.

Dailly also announced that Grade 12 government examainations will be abolished in 1974 and from that time graduation will be determind on the school's own assessment of students.

Scholarship examinations, she said, would still be available for students wishing to write them and with effect from the 1973-74 education year the exams would be held twice a year, in January and June, rather than in June only.

She repeated earlier statements that the government will introduce legislation making it mandatory for all school boards to provide kindergartens — which are not now available in 16 school districts in the province.

But attendance at the kindergarten level will not be compulsory, Dailly added.

On another policy matter announced earlier, Dailly said the two special commissions she is setting up to look into business

Dominion

Dominion Stores Ltd. reports little change in profit in the first three quarters of the current fiscal year although sales increased 17 per cent of $814,723,000.

Net earnings for the 39 weeks to Dec. 16 were $6,091,000 or 73 cents a share compared with $5,827,000 and 72 cents in the corresponding period a year earlier.

Thomas McCormack, vice-chairman and chief executive officer, says in a report to shareholders the company will give complete co-operation to a parliamentary food price inquiry.

He adds: "Influences on the price of food are many and are widespread, not the least of which is the rise in wages, which have risen at a much greater rate than have food prices."

Peyto

Peyto Oils Ltd. lost $2,212 during the six months ended Nov. 30, 1972, compared with a profit of $29,265 in the same period a year earlier.

The company increased cash flow to $106,031 from $91,452 but made higher provisions for depreciation, depletion and well abandonments than in 1971. Gross revenue rose to $276,745 from $210,932.

Villacentres

Villacentres Ltd., a Calgary-based company which operates nursing homes throughout Canada, reports earnings of $705,301 or 35 cents a share for the year ended Dec. 31, 1972.

President Leon Libin said this compared to earnings in the previous year of $523,221 or 26 cents a share.

Cash flow from operations was $1,336,115 or 65 cents a share, up from $1,075,410 or 53 cents a share. Gross revenue was $5,947,761 compared with $3,613,012 in 1971.

At a board of directors meeting the company declared a quarterly dividend of three cents a share payable March 30, 1973 to all shareholders of record March 12, 1973.

IAC

IAC Ltd. reports net earnings of $21,994,000 or $1.65 a share for 1972 compared with $19,415,000 or $1.50 in 1971.

President K. H. MacDonald says in a report to shareholders that the improved report was partly because of new programs which resulted in reductions in charges for some financing and leasing services.

WCI Canada Ltd., formerly Kelvinator of Canada Ltd., reports combined net income, including four companies purchased last September, for the fiscal year ended Sept. 30 of $4,487,412 compared with $769,581 in the previous year.

On a per-share basis this amounted to $2.85, including 79 cents in extraordinary items, up from 49 cents with 21 cents in extraordinary items in 1971.

Royal Trust reports net earnings of $13.3 million or $2.73 a share for the year ended Dec. 31 compared with $10.1 million or $2.14 in 1971.

Total assets under administration at year end were $12.6 billion, up from $11.2 billion at the previous year end.

Net operating profit for 1972 was $12.5 million or $2.57 a share, excluding net gain of $825,000 on investment and disposal of premises.

In assets, the company reports consolidated balance sheet assets of $2.1 billion, up from $1.9 billion in 1971.

Estates, trusts and agency accounts totalled $10.5 billion compared with $9.3 billion the year previous.

C. Breweries

Canadian Breweries Ltd. reports net earnings of $3,161,000 or 9.5 cents a share for the six months ended Dec. 31 compared with $5,412,000 or 19.9 cents in 1971.

An extraordinary gain of $8.5 million or 18 cents a share was also recorded in 1972 from the sale of property in Toronto.

In a statement to shareholders, the company said earnings "reflect increased cost of production and the company may incur a net loss for the remaining six months of the fiscal year."

Rio Algom

Rio Algom Mines Ltd. reports net earnings for 1972 of $16,308,000 or $1.27 a share, up sharply from $9,698,000 and 73 cents in the previous year.

The company says 1972 earnings are after deducting $672,000, Rio Algom's share of the net loss incurred by Lornex Mining Corp. Ltd., from operations for the quarter ended Dec. 31.

Earnings from mining operations increased 50 per cent to $20,776,000 and from steel operations 61 per cent to $3,439,000.

Lornex

Lornex Mining Corp. Ltd. reports a net loss of $1,215,000 or 15 cents a share for the year ended Dec. 31, reflecting the end of the first three months of operations which ended on that date.

The company says progress has been slower than expected in its copper operations because of mechanical considerations.

Westburne

Westburne International Industires Ltd., has announced earnings of $3,099,000 or $1.92 a share for the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1972. Earnings during the period more than doubled the $1,460,000 or 48 cents a share recorded during the same period of 1971.

Gross revenue increased to $129,351,000 from $94,418,000. The increase was attributed to greatly expanded drilling resulting from the current North American energy crisis.

TAX TIPS

This information is supplied by the federal department of national revenue. If further details are required, contact the Victoria District Taxation Office between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. at 388-3551. For those living outside the Victoria exchange area, ask the long-distance operator for Zenith 0-4000 and the call will be placed without charge.

Q. I am a self-employed fisherman operating my own boat without help. Can I declare my actual expenses to the buyer of my fish or must he use the 25 per cent assumed operating costs?

A. The 25 per cent assumed operating costs must be used. Unemployment insurance regulations require that this amount must be deducted regardless of the actual operating costs.

Q. How do you determine the earnings from which the fish buyer will establish the insurable earnings of a captain owner for purposes of calculating his unemployment insurance premiums?

A. The earnings of the fisherman who owns the boat and, or gear used in making the catch, and who is a member of the crew, is for any week considered to be the greater of

(1) Gross returns of the catch. Less (A) Amounts paid to other members of the crew; (B) 25 per cent of gross catch or: (2)) $50.00.

Q. I know this is a contradiction in terms, but in connection with deductions for unemployment insurance premiums who is the "designated employer" of a self-employed fisherman?

A. Any of the following persons under specific conditions could be the "designated employer" of a fisherman in the following order:

(A) Buyer; (B) Head fisherman of the crew; (C) Agent for selling the catch of the crew; (D) Common agent; (E) Member of crew.

In other words, in the case of a self-employed fisherman the first buyer or acquirer of the catch is the "designated employer" provided the catch is delivered in Canada in a "face to face" transaction by a member of the crew who made the catch.

Q. On occasion fish is bought from boats where boat expenses are not known until the boat returns to home port. How should we as the buyer handle this situation?

A. Generally, before you can determine the insurable earnings and the premium deduction required for members of a crew, the declaration made to you as the buyer must include boat expenses. The income tax department recognizes the problems created when the boat expenses are not available at the time the catch is sold and under these circumstances it is prepared to accept estimates of the boat expenses.

Q. My wife shares in the catch as a member of the crew. Can she be insured? I am also a crew member.

A. The wife of a fisherman is not insurable for a catch by a crew of which her husband is a member. The wife's share must be added to the husband's earnings for purposes of calculating his insurable earnings.

Q. How are the insurable earnings determined of a fisherman's helper who is paid on a share-of-the-catch basis?

A. The fisherman must declare to the buyer the share arrangement. The actual monies paid to the helper in accordance with the share arrangement is the amount on which a premium for unemployment insurance is required, subject to the minimum and maximum insurable earnings for the pay period. (I.E. weekly — $30 minimum, $150.00 maximum.)

'Scared Like Hell' Supercop Cote Has 'Technical' Job

By ROLAND MORGAN
Times Staff

The time: December, 1970.

The place: A suburban street in Montreal.

The scene: hundreds of armed troops and police are gazing at a small house where British trade envoy James Cross is being held by Quebec revolutionaries. It's a stalemate.

Suddenly, an arm emerges from the house and throws a length of lead piping into the middle of the street.

Suddenly, after a brief pause, a car rockets out from behind police lines. It swerves by the piece of piping, a door opens and a hand picks up the pipe. The car roars away.

A few blocks away, Lieutenant Robert Cote, head of the technical service, Montreal urban police department, casually pops the plug a ging out of the end of the pipe and pulls out a piece of paper with a message written on it.

The kidnappers want to negotiate a passage to Cuba for Cross's life.

Not for him the drudgery of routine detective work, or the boredom of a suburban patrol car : Lieut. Cote deals only with high-powered time bombs that might go off at any minute, underwater searches for crucial pieces of evidence, and sub-machine gun shoot-outs with desperate criminals.

He has gained such a reputation that last year he was the first policeman ever to gain the Order of Canada, and he is in demand all over the continent for his expertise in what is known as the "technical" field of police work.

Cote was in Victoria on Wednesday, but he hastened to make it clear that British Columbia is not about to become the victim of a terrorist campaign: he said he was addressing a "security conference" of RCMP and armed forces officials. Sorry, that was all he could say.

How do you go about teaching men to defuse bombs?

'It's an art' he says.

teddy bear of a man who could as easily be a shoe salesman as a supercop.

How did he feel about defusing bombs, having worked on more than 200 since the technical squad was formed in 1963 mainly to combat the growing terrorism of the Front de Liberration du Quebec?

"You're scared like hell," Cote replies in his heavy French-Canadian accent.

"... even more than the average cop. You've seen more than a few bodies after a bomb has exploded. You've got your kisser hanging over a ticking clock. I can tell you, your heart goes overtime."

This is the true rhetoric of the role — it could be Madigan, Bullitt, Dick Tracy sitting in Room 212 of the Executive House hotel. The mind flashes to the beautiful heroic cop's wife — Genevieve Bujold, Ali McGraw. Is there a Mrs. Cote?

There is indeed.

It appears she and Lieutenant Cote got married between two bombs in 1968.

A few months later she miscarried a pair of twins during a rash of bomb scares as her husband went from "suspicious package" to "suspicious package."

Finally she gave birth to a bouncing boy, who was promptly named Richard Pierre in honor of Richard Cross and Pierre Laporte, two kidnapped men whom Lieut. Cote fought to save.

Mrs. Cote's fears were not unfounded. In 1968 Lieut. Cote defused a bomb which had been planted in Montreal's downtown Eaton's, then when he inspected the mechanism he found it was due to detonate in two minutes.

"But in every incident it makes no difference really," Cote says.

"Most people believe we have problems getting men, but actually it's the opposite. You see, the work seems interesting. Routine is a big problem in most police work. In the technical squad there is not much of that. Right now, for example, we have four men diving in the St. Lawrence for a murder weapon."

"Even in a big police department like ours you can't have separate teams of divers, bomb experts and sharp-shooters because incidents simply don't happen that often. So, you have one jack-of-all-trades group like ours."

"And it is interesting work. This is what I like to do. I fly all over the country telling people about my work. This is my life."

Some people think it's a charmed life.

People ask Cote to pray for others

When Reader's Digest magazine published an article about Cote's exploits against the FLQ, he was flooded with letters asking him to pray for people's souls.

"They must have thought I had been so lucky with bombs I had some special contact upstairs," Cote says.

"Detectives handle all kinds of danger in different fields of duty," he says. "It just happens that we handle bombs."

Cote thinks technical squads across the country will continue to get better equipped.

"This is a problem facing every city. The FLQ used bombs, but labor and the underworld are using bombs. I feel it's with us to stay."

In spite of this conviction, Cote admits that bombing incidents dropped drastically in Montreal in 1972.

"It compares with 1970 as a quiet year," he says, glancing out at the Empress Hotel as though checking for snipers on the roof. "We only had 29 explosions and we dismantled six other 'suspicious packages'."

Central Saanich Mothers Rally To Local Police

By PAT MUNSON

Mrs. Shirley Monych, 7494 East Saanich Rd. said Wednesday 20 copies of the petition now available for signing in stores and garages will be taken to the regular meeting of Central Saanich council on Monday.

Early this week, the news that council is considering a changeover in police service caused a furore in this community of 5,100 residents.

An RCMP study requested by council in November estimates that the municipality could be policed for about $70,000, about $51,000 less than the 1973 budget figure for Central Saanich police force.

But a number of local taxpayers protest that the municipal police are worth the extra money.

"You can't put a dollar sign on certain things in life" says Mrs. John Windsor, 934 Gregg, who has raised three children in this district.

"Our police know the children's homes and parents and can quickly spot youngsters who are getting out of line. They are not regarded in this community as "the fuzz."

Petition organizer Monych, mother of four, is impressed with the loyalty and goodwill of the local force which was instituted in 1951.

"For instance, the Lions Club is trying to start a lacrosse team and Chief John Gelling is busy rounding up players," she said. "The police control things without pressuring the kids. The policemen are all fathers themselves."

MONYCH
. . . organizer

John Grieve who operates a service station opposite the small police station is emphatic that there should be no change.

"They do a helluva good job and kids will talk to them — they won't go to the RCMP."

Rev. Ivan Futter said a force operating out of Sidney RCMP detachment office might find it difficult to cover Central Saanich and suggests a tie-up with Saanich municipal police force might be more practical.

Futter emphasized he had high regard for the RCMP.

"I was a magistrate in Port Hardy and I couldn't have asked for a finer body of men."

Mayor A. M. Galbraith, who meets the local police force in a closed council committee meeting tonight, said a decision will probably be made by the end of February.

"We are elected to get the best dollar value we can," said Galbraith. "North Saanich has a lower mill rate than we do and this is how they do it. We would certainly be criticized if we did not investigate comparative costs."

In 1971, North Saanich paid $40,000 for RCMP working out of the Sidney office, Central Saanich paid $85,000 for the municipal force.

In 1972, North Saanich paid $52,000 and Central Saanich, $100,000.

Although the cost per man (estimated at $19,000 annually) is about the same in both municipalities, the provincial government absorbs 50 per cent of RCMP costs for the first six members.

For additional members, the cost split is 72-25, with the municipality paying the major share.

Galbraith pointed out that RCMP supply their own patrol cars, radio equipment and headquarters. Within five years, said the mayor, Central Saanich will have to look at new police accommodation. At present, the municipality pays a costly jail cell rental to Victoria police force because the local station has no cell space.

"New police accommodation could be a major capital cost," he said.

Recently established changes in RCMP policy recommend that men live in the communities which they police and take more part in local activities.

"If we do go to RCMP service, it will of course take time for the men to get known," says Galbraith.

The new policy indicates that members will stay in one place for several years, rather than the two-year transfer basis which has, in the past, kept RCMP on the move and often unmarried.

Council is getting plenty of feedback on the proposed change. Mayor Galbraith commented: "If the people want to pay for the present force, well and good!"

Helmcken Rd. Site Abandoned By Regional Hospital Board

The Capital Regional Hospital District Board has abandoned plans to build an extended-care hospital on a 34-acre site on Helmcken Rd.

At a meeting Wednesday, the board accepted an alternative proposal by chairman Art Young to build a 75-bed extended care unit on a smaller site (four acres or more) in the heart of the urban development of Colwood-Langord.

The 225-bed Helmcken Rd. hospital had already been approved in principle by the board.

The new government policy of preserving farmland also influenced the decision, he said.

"It seems funny, it's taken us three years to go almost in a circle," he said.

A study of projected extended care bed requirement by the research division of the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service "clearly indicates" that the area west of Parsons Bridge needs no more than 45 extended care beds, Young said.

"This is a further reason why the provincial government has been loath to proceed with the purchase of a site which was destined for a 225-bed extended care unit," he said.

The proposed alternative 75-bed unit in Colwood-Langford will act as an eventual replacement for St. Mary's Priory Hospital, said Young.

It will also "have built into its design the capability of adding a community health centre."

YOUNG

The board approved in principle the allocation of the 150 other extended care beds to a site within the urban core of the region, possibly near an existing acute hospital.

"Certainly the land is available at Jubilee (Hospital)" for the extra beds, said Mayor Frances Elford of Oak Bay.

In other business, the board appointed A. W. E. Pitkethley to make an in-depth study of the potential of the 270-bed Veterans' Hospital as a "community resource."

Cost of Pitkethley's report, which is to be completed by the end of March, will be a maximum of $3,000, and the federal government will pay half.

The report will go to federal and provincial representatives negotiating sale of the hospital to the provincial government for a nominal fee of $1, said Young.

Q. Can you help me trace a collection of ghost poems, entitled "The Haunted Hour"? — Mrs. M. J. S.

A. The book seems to be out of print, according to local book stores. The Public Library has no information on book or title, but suggests you check at used book stores.

Hall Records Asked

Victoria city council will be asked to have a dozen church halls in the city submit an annual financial statement and a record of hall use.

Council's finance committee was told today that some church halls are charging up to $125 a day for their facilities.

At the same time, church halls are tax exempt.

Assessor Alf Joyce said he gets many complaints from community halls, such as legion clubs, which have to pay taxes, and which find themselves competing against church halls.

Joyce said a city council report suggested in 1964 that church halls be asked to submit a financial statement.

Ald. Alf Hood said church halls should have the same rules as community halls.

"If they are renting them, then we tax them," he said.

Hood said the halls could be taxed on the basis of their financial statement each year.

Ald. Hood: "If you can't put a church on an honor system, who can you? . . . (laughter)".

Ald. Percy Frampton said the city should "try it out for a year." But on second thoughts, he pointed out, that a church hall might be rented out only half a dozen times and find itself paying almost as much tax as its income.

In spite of these doubts the committee agreed to recommend to council anyway that church halls be required to submit financial statements. Taxation may or may not follow.

WARM WELCOME by Chef Ian Hendry awaits the first eight residents scheduled to arrive at Tillicum Lodge for the elderly today. The $1 million provincial government rest home in Saanich will provide personal care for 152 older people who are not confined to bed but need help with day-to-day tasks. No official opening date has been set for the rest home which is located just off Interurban Road near Glendale Hospital. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Blue Line Versus Blue Line

Subject to a legal check, B.C. Hydro Royal Blue Line sightseeing buses may face a line of police when the tourist season opens.

Hydro is refusing to pay a $140 licence fee required by the city on each of its buses.

Hydro claims its licence charges are included in a grant the crown corporation pays to the city.

But Acting Mayor Tom Christie doesn't quite agree.

"If there's a licence of $140 per bus they should pay it just like everybody else," he told city council's tourism committee today.

"We should send them an invoice for the fees," he said, "and if they don't pay then we'll just have to call in the police and tell them: No Tickee, No Shirtee."

City officials were not sure whether bus tour licences were specifically mentioned in the Hydro's grant. The matter was referred to the city solicitor for study.

In other business the city manager reported that he had applied for $850,000 from the provincial Winter Capital Projects Fund for a Broughton Street parking garage. The building will contain 400 parking spaces, between Broughton and Courtney streets east of Douglas.

City Passengers Frisked

The first phase of a new security program at Victoria International Airport which requires all boarding passengers to be searched started today.

"The program is strictly a hand search of boarding passengers now, pending arrival of electronic inspection equipment," an Air Canada spokesman said.

Security will eventually require that every passenger undergo an inspection with a metal-detector or magnetometer and a search of all hand luggage.

The program, expected to cost more than $1 million a year will affect all flights coming into Canada from the States.

It's expected that the measures will be in effect at all domestic airports served by the airline and at all foreign airports to which it flies by the end of the month.

25 Capsules Convict Man

A 33-year-old Victoria man was convicted of possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking Wednesday when county court Judge Tyrwhitt-Drake ruled that 25 capsules is more than the simple user is likely to have.

Daniel Arthur Lansall, 1243 Oscar, was arrested Sept. 7 while in possession of a balloon containing 25 caps of heroin.

Const. Michael Onischuk, a four-year member of the RCMP Victoria sub-division drug section and former undercover agent, was called by Prosecutor Michael Hutchisnon to give opinion evidence.

From his experience "the most common way of distributing heroin is in the balloon or condom which contains 25 capsules," he said.

He said a balloon can be purchased for $250 and a person buying a balloon can buy heroin for $10 to $12 a cap, depending on the supply and demand. The cost of buying one cap at a time is about $20.

TWO-CAP HABIT

If a person in Victoria buys 25 or 50 caps of heroin "it is the practice to traffic," he said. "I've yet to see a heroin addict buy more than two caps at a time."

In summation, defence counsel David Lysson said Lansall had a habit of two caps a day at the time of his arrest. Twenty-five caps would keep him supplied for 12 or 13 days and buying drugs by the balloon would cost half as much as buying a cap a day.

He also said daily purchases would provide more opportunities for detection by the police.

"The less frequently a purchase has to be made, the less risk," he said.

The Crown was attempting to invite the judge to make an inference from the amount of heroin, said Lysson.

"The quantity involved here . . . is more than the simple user is likely to have on him at one time. It's very difficult to find any other inference," said Drake.

SURVEILLANCE

Testimony given by Const. Robert Bowen, of Victoria RCMP sub-division drug section, was that Lansall's former home, 915 McNaughton, was under surveillance by Bowen and Const. David McGregor of Saanich police about 11 p.m. on Sept. 7.

Lansall came out of the house, walked to the edge of the back yard, looked up and down the street, then went near the fence and crouched from the view of the two officers, watching from a neighbor's yard, Bowen testified.

The officers jumped the fence and chased the accused toward the street. During the chase Lansall made a throwing motion as he passed some flowers, said Bowen.

He was apprehended by Bowen, and McGregor shone a flashlight in his mouth to check for drugs.

The area was searched and the balloon was found sitting on a leaf.

McGregor, attached to the RCMP drug section last September, told the court Lansall was handcuffed and taken to an interview room at Victoria police department.

During the interview McGregor noticed a fresh needle track and "numerous" other needle marks on the accused's arms.

Under cross-examination by Lysson, McGregor testified that he did not see Lansall holding the heroin at any time and did not see any object leave his hand when he made the throwing motion.

Lysson told the judge there was no evidence that the balloon couldn't have been on the leaf for a substantial period of time and that it is a natural reaction to run when approached by two men in the dark.

Hutchison argued the balloon had been found in the area where Lansall had made the throwing motion and it's position indicated it couldn't have been there long.

Before ruling on the possession aspect of the charge, the judge said from the circumstances "I am quite unable to come to any other inference."

He remanded the case to Feb. 28 for sentence. The charge carries a possible sentence of life imprisonment, said Drake, and he ordered Lansall be held in custody while awaiting sentence.

ELEVATOR PROBE?

HALIFAX (CP) — The Nova Scotia government is seeking a multiprovince agreement to establish an industrial inquiry commission into the five-month dispute between the Canadian Elevator Manufacturers Association and the International Union of Elevator Constructors.

Following three weeks of behind-the-scenes work by Nova Scotia's Deputy Labor Minister Ray Anderson, Labor Minister Scott MacNutt announced in the legislature Wednesday that most provinces are in agreement with the proposed commission.

Of the provinces likely to take part in such a commission, only British Columbia and Manitoba remain to be heard from and both are understood to be receptive.

Saskatchewan and Alberta lack the legislative machinery to participate. Ontario is involved in negotiations and Quebec has ordered its workers back.

MacNutt noted that negotiations with mediator W. H. Dickie, Ontario's assistant deputy labor minister, were adjourned Feb. 9 and no formal meetings are scheduled.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 19-year-old Saanich man who pleaded guilty to possessing hashish was granted a conditional discharge in provincial court Wednesday because there was "no selfish reason" behind his request for leniency.

Judge William Ostler granted the conditional discharge to Delan Ralph Kunitz, 3326 Panther, based on two factors: the future of a child and a landmark ruling for Canadian courts established by the B.C. Appeal Court in Vancouver earlier this week.

Kunitz was found guilty Jan. 25 following a trial on a charge of possession of a small amount of hashish last Sept. 28 in Bastion Square.

In pronouncing sentence, which includes a six-month peace bond, Judge Ostler said: It is obvious there is a specific reason for asking for a discharge and in this light I regard it as not a selfish reason."

Kunitz said his baby daughter had been given up for adoption by her mother and he was asking the B.C. Supreme Court for custody of the child.

Owen-Flood then mentioned the Apeal Court ruling in Vancouver Tuesday granting an absolute discharge to Robert Hampton, 46, of 1580 Despard, who had appealed a decision last Sept. 16 by Ostler against such a discharge and in favor of a $250 fine of shoplifting.

The case was a landmark in that it was said to be the first appeal against a lower court's refusal to grant a discharge to reach a higher court in Canada.

"The man has a natural child and wishes to go before Supreme Court to ask for custody in view of certain evidence," Ostler told provincial court Wednesday.

"I grant a discharge because it would be in the best interest of the accused" and "it is in the public interest that that honorable court (B.C. Supreme Court) be enabled to determine the application . . . on the basis of what is in the best interest of the child."

It is in the best interest of the public, he said that "the custody application should be unencumbered" by such a conviction.

James Robert Jenkins, 2083 Meadow was sentenced to three months imprisonment and 18 months' probation on a charge of contributing to juvenile delinquency by having sexual intercourse with a 14-year-old girl.

Ostler called Jenkins "a young man who was in a position of sensitivity and trust, who was indeed a child-care worker, and whilst in this position was using a 14-year-old girl."

He pleaded guilty in December. Ostler ordered him to stay away from the girl unles he had her parents' permision.

The case of a 20-year-old Victoria man, who was so overcome by remorse that he turned himself in to police after breaking into an apartment, was adjourned to March 1 for a pre-sentence report.

David L. Ryan, 1083 Redfern, entered an apartment at 1233 Fairfield, Feb. 13, by slipping the lock on the door. He stole $1.80 in dimes from a piggy bank and four packages of cigarettes.

David C. F. Smith, 18, of 134 St. Lawrence was fined $75 after he was convicted of possesing a matchbox of hashish.

Smith was arrested by Saanich police Nov. 9, in a restaurant parking lot.

Lavern A. Kropp, 47, of 2903 North Park, was fined a total of $600 on two separate charges of impaired driving and refusing to take a breathalyzer test.

Milk Hike Asked

REGINA (CP) — The costs of producing fluid milk in Saskatchewan rose 18 per cent last year and dairymen reacted Wednesday by calling for an immediate 15 per cent increase in the price they get for milk.

The call for the higher return came from delegates attending the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Milk Producers Association.

Lewis to Visit Jailed Union Chiefs

people

OTTAWA — New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis plans a visit Friday to three Quebec labor leaders imprisoned for activities connected with common-front strikes in the province last year.

His office announced Wednesday night that Lewis would go to Quebec City Friday and visit Orsainville Jail to see Marcel Pepin, Louis Laberge and Yvon Charbonneau.

The three went into jail last week after failure of an attempt to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada against their convictions last May for contempt of court.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — When the state called its first witness in the circuit court case against 22-year-old Marvin Holloman, Rufus Stokes, the elderly victim of the crime, stepped forward. He testified that Holloman held a knife at his throat and robbed him.

"Is the man who robbed you in the courtroom?" asked Assistant State Attorney Harry Gulkins.

Stokes said, "Yes," fixed his eyes on the jury box and pointed to juror No. 3, a middle-aged man with spectacles who bore no resemblance to the youthful defendant.

"That's him," said Stokes.

"The state rests," sighed Prosecutor Gulkins.

"Case dismissed," said the judge.

BELASQUES
. . . onion advocate

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — An onion a day keeps 92-year-old Ricardo (Basco) Belasques fit for his eight-hour stint at a steel mill.

"I love to work, so why should I retire?" he asked after a shift of grabbing and sorting 20-pound steel bars as they come out of a machine.

Belasques, who will be 93 in April, has been working at the Bethlehem Corp. plant for 30 years. Asked the secret of his energy, Belasques — who came to this country from Spain and speaks no English — said through an interpreter:

"Well, I eat a whole onion every day. Every day of the year."

Then he added that once in a while he takes a shot of whisky after work.

LONDON — Cooking authority Julia Child appeared on British television and some viewers thought she was tipsy.

"I believe in having fun in the kitchen and being informal," Mrs. Child said after her British television debut on the BBC network. "If people thought I was drunk they were wrong. But I'm pleased to know they were wondering." Mrs. Child dropped or knocked over some of her kitchen equipment, cracked jokes and wreaked her usual havoc in teaching people how to cook.

LOS ANGELES — A lawsuit against Communist activist Angela Davis, aimed at preventing her from going back to UCLA as a philosophy professor, was dismissed Wednesday.

The judge ruled the suit was moot, on the grounds that the University of California board of regents has already made it clear that Miss Davis stands no chance of ever being rehired. Miss Davis, who stood trial for murder in the Marin County courthouse shootings, was originally fired in 1969 for being a Communist. A court ruled the dismissal was unconstitutional, and the board of regents then refused to renew her contract, on the grounds her radical activities off campus disqualified her as a faculty member.

AIELLO DEL FRIULI, Italy — Frank "Three Fingers" Coppola, a one-time reputed underworld leader in Kansas City, settled down today to four years of exile in this remote village near the Yugoslav border.

Coppola, 73, arrived Wednesday with his nephew Pino, checked in at the only hotel in the area and immediately was visited by police officials. He later paid a call on the mayor. A small crowd turned out to see the arrival of the new resident celebrity. Coppola, deported from the United States in 1948 as "undesirable," is one of 114 persons awaiting trial as alleged members of the so-called New Mafia, which officials say is led by Sicilian Gerlando Alberti.

CAIRO — Sheikh Mohammed El-Fahham, Egypt's Moslem religious leader ruled Wednesday that women are not qualified to serve as assistants to the public prosecutor.

The ruling followed an earlier one saying that women were not fit to serve as judges, the Middle East News Agency said. Fahham did not explain his ruling.

NEW YORK — Mrs. Marion McAllister, wife of a subway yardmaster and mother of a 15-year-old daughter, is the first woman to qualify for training as a subway motorman.

"I'm a bit nervous. I'll just have to try to do my best and see what happens," Mrs. McAllister said Wednesday as she reported for her first day of classes.

Mrs. McAllister said she decided to take the motorman's test because "I wanted to learn more about the system and see just what knowledge I had about the railroad." She finished 19th in a field of 1,084. Only 259 passed the exam last April.

MURDER FAMILY AFFAIR

By STEPHEN SCOTT

Surprisingly few Canadian murders are committed as a part of another criminal activity. In fact there sometimes are more arguments settled with a gun than criminal acts completed.

The figures show that of the 425 murders reported by police in 1971, the last complete year available, 193 were the result of shooting.

Eighty-two were the result of beating, 67 the result of stabbing, 29 strangling, six suffocating, six drowning, 10 arson, 29 the result of other means of killing and three the result of unknown causes.

The statistics show that those proportions hold about true for the years dating back to 1967. The exception was 1970 when 40 persons died in a deliberately set fire in Quebec.

KILLED RELATIVES

Of those 425 murders in 1971, a total of 150 were classified as domestic. That is, the victims were members of the killer's immediate family or related in some other way or were partners in a common-law relationship.

A total of 169 were classified as "others." That takes in a variety of killings including those following excessive drinking—27 in 1971—and those immediately following an argument—49. Other "others" could be gangland killings—five—and cases of jealousy.

The statistics bureau gives these percentages for the years 1967 to 1971:

Domestic murders: 43.6 per cent of a total of 282 murders in 1967; 37.6 per cent of 315 in 1968; 37.6 per cent of 346 in 1969; 32.2 per cent of 432 in 1970; 35.3 per cent of 425 in 1971.

During commission of a criminal act, such as robbery, rape and arson: 9.9 per cent with 28 victims in 1967; 13.3 per cent with 42 victims in 1968; 9.8 per cent with 34 victims in 1969; 20.6 per cent with 89 victims in 1970 and 10.1 per cent with 43 victims in 1971.

In the period 1961-1971, there were 2,778 murder incidents reported involving 3,099 victims.

These and other statistics have become available as Parliament considers whether to extend capital punishment or to continue to ban it, except for the murder of police officers and prison guards.

At the same time recent murders of Toronto policemen have spurred renewed talk of gun control laws.

More Drug Charges

COQUITLAM (CP) — Five persons were arrested on drug charges here Wednesday. A youth was charged with possession of MDA and marijuana. Two people were charged with possession of marijuana for the purposes of trafficking and two others were charged with possession of marijuana. Weekend raids resulted in 15 arrests in Port Coquitlam.

Que. Cabinet Juggled

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa shuffled his cabinet Wednesday in what was described as a move to stress the government's commitment to improve the quality of life in Quebec.

The two major changes see Victor Goldbloom become municipal affairs minister while remaining minister responsible for environment; and Francois Cloutier take over the cultural affairs portfolio while retaining education.

Claire Kirland-Casgrain, who succeeded Cloutier in cultural affairs after he was named education minister a year ago, announced her retirement.

Other cabinet changes:

● Paul Phaneuf, becomes minister without portfolio responsible for youth, recreation and sports.

● Maurice Tessier moves from municipal affairs to public works.

● Oswald Parent becomes minister of the public service but retains his post as minister without portfolio with responsibility for intergovernmental affairs and finance.

● Robert Quenneville, minister without portfolio responsible for the Office of Development of Eastern Quebec, is given additional responsibility for "the preparation and application" of Local Initiative Opportunities for Youth projects.

● Georges Vaillancourt was named minister without portfolio, with some responsibility for municipal affairs at the regional level.

WACHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — America's Roman Catholic bishops have issued a pastoral message containing unprecedented advice for disobedience of "any civil law that may require abortion" and pronouncing excommunication on any Catholic who "undergo or perform an abortion."

The message to the faithful, issued for Tuesday for the U.S. hierarchy by the administrative committee of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, called the recent supreme court ruling striking down most state laws baring abortions "wrong and entirely contary to the fundamental principles of morality."

Reasoning that "our American law and way of life comprise an obvious and certain recognition of the law of God, and that our legal system is both based on it, and must conform to it," the bishops' statement condones civil disobedience because "we reject the opinion of the U.S. supreme court as errneus, unjust and immoral."

A quick check of the recent history of American Catholicism disclosed no other situation inwhich the hierarchy, generally strongly on the side of law and order, has found sufficent moral reason to council breaking the law.

In a press conference called to release the pastoral message, Msgr. James T. McHugh, director of the U.S. Catholic conference's family life division said the council to disobey "any civil law that may require abortion," applied primarily to medical personnel.

He said that the Wisconsin legislature was considering a law which could threaten the licensure of a doctor or nurse who refused to perform an abortion.

Msgr. McHugh sand there was also concern that the supreme court decision would increase pressures on women to have abortions.

"We very seriously fear that people receiving public assistance will be the first ones coerced into having abortions," he said.

UVic Senate Studies Mid-Term Admitting

University of Victoria senate will look into ways of admitting full-time students in January as well as September.

The Senate Wednesday asked Dr. D. J. MacLaurin, dean of academic affairs, to form a committee to examine the possibility.

It was responding to an urgent request by Mrs. Elizabeth Kennedy, who presented the report of the committee on entrance requirements and standards to senate.

Starting in January, 1974, high school students will be able to write scholarship exams in January as well as June, Mrs. Kennedy said. The current estimate is that one-third of students writing scholarship exams will be doing it in January, she said.

She urged senate to make some provision for enrolling these students, many of whom will be the brighter high school students.

"A possible solution is a semester system, but there are other solutions as well," said Mrs. Kennedy.

In other business, senate:

—Rescinded a decision made last September that students not be permitted to register at UVic and Camosun College at the same time. This will now be possible if the student has permission from his dean.

—Accepted the recommendation of an ad hoc committee that the department of history in art remain in the fine arts faculty and not move to the faculty of arts and sciences, as requested unanimously by faculty in the department.

The committee said the transfer should wait until programs of study in the department are "reasonably stabilized". At the moment the department is undergoing a major revision of its programs, said committee chairman Mrs. Kennedy.

PPWC to Delay Certification Bid

PORT ALBERNI — Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada have not applied for certification at the Alberni Pacific Division sawmill here.

With the deadline to bid for bargaining rights up today, the PPWC will be challenging the International Woodworkers of America here only for the right to represent 1,060 workers at MacMillan Bloedel's Somass Division, a sawmill and adjacent shingle mill.

PPWC president Fred Mullin said today the union didn't have enough time to organize the Alberni Pacific Division's 640 workers before the deadline.

"We were asked in (to the mill) but we were asked in at a late date," Mullin said. He said the PPWC is confident it will be applying for certification for the mill next December.

Mullin said he was very hopeful that the B.C. Labor Relations Board will give certification at Somass to the PPWC and not the IWA, which holds bargaining rights at both mills now.

"All we're looking for is a vote," he said...

The Labor Relations Board can approve the application, reject it, call a hearing of the parties involved or order a representation vote. Its decision will probably not be announced for a month or more.

The PPWC has also applied for certification for the 120-employee Ladysmith Forest Products sawmill, which is now an IWA stronghold.

Cars Crash, Three Hurt

Three persons were injured and $2,000 damage done in a two-car collision on Cadboro Bay Road Wednesday evening.

Driver David Stone Sutton, 943 Hampshire, was northbound on Cadboro Bay when in collision with a car driven by Vaughan Alexander Dickson, 2096 Avondale. The 5 p.m. crash occurred at the intersection of Cardigan and Cadboro Bay.

Both drivers and a passenger in the Dickson vehicle were treated in hospital and later released.

STUDIO WINGS CLIPPED

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council Tuesday night approved a three-month business licence for Fiesta Dance Studios.

The licence is to be reviewed in three months and the firm is not to issue any contracts or accept prepayments for dance lessons under its terms.

The decision was taken on the recommendation of Vince Forbes of the Better Business Bureau. Dance studios have been criticized recently for involving potential students in long-term contracts for costly lessons.

Port Dispute Halts Work At Sukunka

VANCOUVER (CP) — An acrimonious dispute between the federal and provincial governments has halted development of the big Sukunka coal mining property in northern British Columbia.

Cliff Sawyer, general manager of Coalition Mining Ltd., announced Wednesday that the company has laid off 28, more than half its work force of 50 at the mine site near Chetwynd, and suspended a Vancouver contract for supply of a coal-cleaning plant until the federal and B.C. governments resolve their dispute over the site for a port to handle coal shipments.

Coalition was to have made a decision Jan. 31 on whether to put the Sukunka property into full production.

"We have suspended the decision until we get clarification on the seaport that will be used," Sawyer said in an interview.

"Until it is resolved, we have to cut back on our expenses. There was no way we could go on investing money against a background of such uncertainty."

In August, former premier Bennett announced that the provincially-owned B.C. Railway had negotiated a 20-year contract with Coalition to carry coal some 430 miles southward to a port at Squamish.

Since the election of the New Democratic Party government in the Aug. 30 provincial election, the site of the post has been changed to Britannia, five miles south of Squamish.

2 Injured In Colwood

Two motorists suffered minor injuries in a collision at 8:45 a.m. today in Colwood which involved four vehicles.

The mishap occurred on Highway 1A near Prince Robert Drive.

Colwood police said Stephen J. Nagy of 2780 Spencer was travelling north when his auto collided with three southbound vehicles. Nagy suffered minor chest injuries.

The driver of one of the other cars, Sharon Quayle, 20, of 642 Raylor, received minor cuts and bruises and was taken to hospital.

The other two cars were driven by Marion Mayhew, 22, of 2250 Marlene Drive, and Ernest Beadle, 29, of 1470 Dallas.

MD Inquiry Continues

A closed-door inquiry by the British Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons under Section 49 of the Medical Act into the professional conduct of former Victoria doctor John G. Patterson went into its third day today.

Wednesday the three-doctor examining panel held three sittings, morning, afternoon and evening. The college is considering 31 separate points related to Patterson's conduct.

When practising in Victoria, up to June of 1972, Patterson was involved with a controversial methadone substitution program for heroin addicts.

MP Fined $250 by Court

RICHMOND (CP) — Paddy Neale, NDP MP for Vancouver East, was fined $250 Wednesday and prohibited from driving for one month after being found guilty of failing to submit to a breath analysis test.

The sentence was imposed by Richmond provincial Judge R. W. Greig, who found Neale guilty at a trial Dec. 7, when Neale was acquitted of a charge of impaired driving.

The charges were laid after Neale was stopped in a police speed trap in this Vancouver suburb last Aug. 26.

B.C. May Give Addicts Heroin

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi told a crowd of concerned citizens Wednesday night that eventually the government may simply have to give drugs to addicts.

More than 500 people were gathered in Vic High auditorium to discuss, in an open forum, Victoria's growing drug problem.

They listened to the problems, frustrations and sad testimonials of more than 30 people.

They heard few solutions.

Levi told them the problem "rests squarely" on the provincial government and they were prepared to be "pretty adventuresome" in trying to find a solution.

"We need to try a number of different ways," he said.

"But in my opinion, not many people can get off it — if they're on hard stuff.

"In the long haul we may just have to accept we're going to have to give them the drug . . . it would be less costly and more humane."

He told the meeting a government policy position on drugs was being worked out and would come before the house during this session.

He suggested a drug dependence commission, with some kind of full time staff, may be appointed.

The floor was opened for the public to bring forth their experiences and their ideas for dealing with drug addiction and people were soon queuing up in front of the microphone.

Most who spoke were soon carried away with their own stories and could offer only vague solutions, while moderator Peter Lesoway, president of the Canadian Concerned Citizens group, kept calling for constructive ideas.

Several drug addicts and former drug users spoke and most said they couldn't explain why they had turned to drugs.

"If I had to put my finger on it I'd say it was lack of anything else to do," one young heroin addict explained, and many seemed to agree with him.

One concrete solution was offered by Dr. Jim Lang, Victoria director of the Narcotics Addiction Foundation, who said he hoped to start a house for those fighting drug addiction and eventually to acquire a farm outside the community.

"We must pressure the government to take drugs out of the criminal area and into the mental health area," Lang said.

The idea of drug addiction as a medical problem was stressed through out the evening, especially by Oak Bay MLA Dr. Scott Wallace who sat on the platform.

Wallace said his generation had looked unsympathetically on self-inflicted sicknesses such as drug addiction.

But drugs should be looked on as a mental health problem which lead to physical

Viet Guards Harassing Observers

Times News Services

The Polish and Hungarian delegations to the International Commission for Control and Supervision are threatening to move their troops out of the commission's compound at the base.

Canadian officitls in limousines and scout cars flying the red maple leaf flag have been delayed for as long as four hours at the main gate in almost invariably futile attempts to escort Canadian and U.S. journalists to their compound.

Sources say the Poles are furious because their chief delegate, Bogdan Wasilewski, has been stopped several times at the gates and required to show his identity cards although his car was flying the commission flag.

The Hungarians object strongly to having to pass through the guard posts of another nation.

"I try to hang as much shoulder out of the window as possible every time I go past that guard point so they'll see the gold bars," said a Canadian colonel, "but it doesn't always work."

Indonesia is the other member of the four-nation supervisory commission.

Meanwhile, two North Vietnamese representatives of the Joint Military Commission ran into trouble today in Hue, where a dozen South Vietnamese surrounded their car, beat on it with bamboo sticks and wet one of the men with some sort of liquid thrown into the car. The asssilants backed away when an escort of South Vietnamese MPs got out of their car. The North Vietnamese were not hurt.

In Washington, meanwhile, President Nixon's plans to help reconstruct North Vietnam are in serious trouble in Congress, despite the agreement on a postwar economic program between the U.S. and its foe in almost a decade of war.

Foreign aid experts in congress said the program was a probable casualty of this session no matter how carefully the administration tailors it to meet the legislators' objections.

The amount of aid is considered to be the least of the obstacles. Early indications are that the $7.5 billion, five-year figure for both North and South Vietnam will be sharply pared before it is submitted to congress.

Most important is the decision whether the reconstruction money will be funneled directly from Washington to Hanoi and Saigon, or handled and administered by an international agency such as the Asian Development Bank or the United Nations.

In Hanoi the government radio charged today the United States was building up an undercover force in Vietnam of up to 10,000 civilians.

Although top U.S. officials are keeping its size a top secret, guesses are that the expeditionary corps of military disguised as civilians will run between 6,000 and 10,000 men," the radio said.

WHY SHOOT HEROIN?

By WILLIAM RASPBERRY
(A commentary by a Washington Post columnist.)

There is one piece of the drug-abuse puzzle that hardly anybody wants to handle. It's almost as though we forget that it's there.

That is the question: What is wrong with drug addicts?

Not after they're hooked — everybody knows then what's wrong. I mean, what is wrong with a person that makes him, with full knowledge of what heroin can do, want to shoot up anyway? The first time.

If we could answer that question, and do something about it, we could dismantle the bureau of narcotics and dangerous drugs and send its agents someplace where their services really are needed — to one of the big pharmaceutical houses, for instance.

There would be no need for strongarm agreements with Turkey, where the opium poppy flourishes, or France, where it is processed; no reason for so many customs people searching for (or maybe being bribed not to search for) smuggled narcotics; no incredibly lucrative mainstay for organized crime, and considerably less compulsion for the dope-inspired unorganized crime.

All it would take is for the poor schnook on the street to say: No, thanks.

It is extremely doubtful that any anti-drug program will work. Everybody knows that, of course. But when we are confronted with a massive problem, there is the almost irresistible temptation to try massive solutions.

We trick outselves into looking for kingpins and keystones — those few central figures who, if they were removed, would topple the entire structure.

So we threaten to halt foreign aid to Turkey; we raise the penalties for smuggling; we propose (as did New York's Gov. Rockefeller) automatic life sentences for every penny-ante pusher; we keep adding men — and money for anti-drug law enforcement.

Occasionally, there is a payoff for all this investment of pressure, time and money — for instance, the recent bust that, according to the papers, cut off a fourth of the illicit drugs that had been reaching

EIGHT TONS OF POT are unloaded from a Mexican freighter in Los Angeles in what U.S. customs officers called the largest marijuana seizure ever in the U.S. Some 7,000 one-kilo bricks of the drug were found in boxes labelled "coffee." The largest previous seizure was five tons of marijuana.

$269,866 CALENDAR

OTTAWA (CP) — It cost the public $269,866 for 800,000 1973 calendars sent out free by the post office, the Commons was told Wednesday.

Only the cost of production by Metropole Litho Inc. of Montreal was shown. One edition was revised after "some errors" were found. The calendars gave February three extra days.

Distribution to the general public and the business community was made through post offices.

Pilots' Walkout Tonight

British Columbia pilots will stop work at midnight tonight following a breakdown of wage negotiations with Pacific Pilotage Authority.

Thirty pilots stationed in Victoria will be affected by the work stoppage which will bring almost a complete closure of deepsea activity in B.C. ports.

All shipping companies have been notified of the pending work stoppage. About five deepsea vessels are expected in B.C. waters by Saturday and more than 40 in the next two weeks.

Stanley Clarke, chairman of the Pacific Pilotage Authority said that "negotiations now have come to an end as a result of the exorbitant demands of 'British Columbia Coast Pilots Ltd.'"

Clarke said that although claiming not to be primarily concerned with monetary demands, the company has in fact insisted on a final settlement package which would cost the authority approximately 30 per cent more for pilots' service in the first year.

$ Shockwaves Spread, 3 Currencies Devalued

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Shockwaves of the U.S. dollar devaluation spread today and three more European countries devalued their currencies. Pandemonium hit the London gold market and the price of gold soared again to a new all-time high.

Finland and Sweden devalued their currencies by five per cent. The Portuguese escudo dropped 3.5 per cent by government decree. Scores of other nations revalued their currencies upward. The dollar was weak in Asia, especially on the Tokyo money market.

On the London bullion market a flood of Asian buy orders shot up the price of gold $1.15 to a new peak of $73.62 an ounce.

The rise followed a record breaking $3 jump Wednesday.

The flood of orders showed little sign of tapering off and the new price effectively jumped gold's value against the dollar by 1 per cent since the eruption of the crisis three weeks ago.

The dollar improved slightly in Britain, however, where banks were exchanging pounds for $2.465 against $2.47, Wednesday.

In Zurich, the dollar lost ground again, changing hands at 3.355 Swiss francs for each dollar versus 3.377 Wednesday. This represented an effective 14 per cent increase in the value of the Franc against the dollar.

Denmark and Norway said their currencies would hold their value.

Spain's markets remained closed, but the Bank of Spain continued to allow tourists to change $50 at the pre-devaluation rate of 63 pesetas.

The nine members of the European Common Market said today President Nixon's decision to devalue the dollar by 10 per cent would contribute to resolving world balance of payments problems. But they said his action would not stop them from going ahead with work on a worldwide monetary overhaul.

In Brussels, at the end of a five-hour meeting to discuss post-devaluation strategy, Common Market finance ministers said splits and divisions within the huge trade block would not keep them from moving toward economic unity.

They also ignored threats of trade reprisals from the

No More Navy Whiskers

The defence department has clipped its two-year-old regulation allowing members of the forces to grow beards.

As of Feb. 8 commanding officers are no longer able to grant permission for their men to raise whiskers, a Maritime Command spokesman said today.

No explanation for the order has arrived yet from Ottawa and the status of many existing beards is uncertain.

The spokesman said there had been speculation that men with beards may be allowed to keep them, provided they never shave again.

Meanwhile, the sea element of the forces appears to be in line for another crushing blow to tradition — the removal of naval officers' rank title, which has been under consideration for some time.

There is nothing official yet, the command spokesman said, but he expected it to happen this year.

The use of ranks such as lieutenant-commander, commander and commodore had been permitted for sea duty even though all other Canadian officers had been assigned military titles, including air force officers.

Ottawa also reports all reserve forces would be issued green berets as standard issue by the end of 1973, along with the standard green uniform. Highland units will retain the kilt.

Heath To Fight

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Edward Heath headed into a showdown with Britain's labor unions today over his pledge to preserve tight anti-inflation curbs on pay and prices.

British political commentators reported growing speculation he is ready to carry the fight to the nation itself in an early parliamentary general election on the issue: "Who runs Britain — the labor unions or the government?"

Heath drew the battle lines in a two-hour confrontation at his No. 10 Downing St. office Wednesday with the general council of the Trades Union Congress which represents 10 million British workers.

He said afterwards that he told the union leaders his government is determined to win the war against inflation. He ruled out any exceptions to the tough pay curbs it has laid down.

"We are determined to win the war against inflation. That is the government's policy. I believe it's the national policy and I'm absolutely con-

SHANGHAI BIGGEST CITY

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Shanghai has moved ahead of Tokyo and New York to become the world's biggest city with a population of 10.8 million, the U.N. demographic yearbook reports.

The 816-page report also included for the first time data on abortion.

The survey also disclosed such facts as that in seven countries, men have a longer life expectancy than women, that the lifespan in some nations is only 25 and that the New York borough of Manhattan has a population density of nearly 68,000 persons per square mile.

For the first time, the yearbook contains data from China, which was admitted to the United Nations in October, 1971.

B.C. Bans the Strap in Schools

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The day of the strap is over in British Columbia's schools, Education Minister Eileen Dailly told the legislature Wednesday.

By order-in-council on Friday, the provincial government will ban all corporal punishment in the province's public schools and amend the Public Schools Act regulations to stipulate that the discipline enforced "shall be similar to that of a kind, firm and judicious parent," she said.

Dailly said as minister of education she cannot in all conscience preside over a school system which condones and permits the use of corporal punishment.

"Surely, if we want to reduce acts of violence in our community and in the world we must eliminate acts of violence in our schools," she said. "If we want to develop future generations into more human people we must practise humanity ourselves."

Speaking in the budget debate, the education minister made several other major policy announcements, including:

—Institution in 1974 of a set spring vacation at the end of March, so that the holiday will not be inflexibly tied to Easter.

—An assurance that federal funds provided for French language instruction will be reserved exclusively for that purpose and not — as she said they had been under the Social Credit government — absorbed into general revenue.

—A system to enable adults who have not graduated from secondary school to qualify for "senior secondary school equivalency diplomas," so that they are not barred from job promotions or new employment or training opportunities.

—Expansion of family living and sex education programs throughout the public schools system.

—Creation of the post of Director of Indian Education in the department's special services division. A native Indian will be appointed to this permanent position in April, charged with studying ways of improving educational opportunities for Indian children and making the curriculum "more relevant" to their needs.

Dailly also announced that Grade 12 government examinations will be abolished in 1974 and from that time graduation will be determind on the school's own assessment of students.

Scholarship examinations, she said, would still be available for students wishing to write them and with effect from the 1973-74 education year the exams would be held twice a year, in January and June, rather than in June only.

She repeated earlier statements that the government will introduce legislation making it mandatory for all school boards to provide kindergartens — which are not now available in 16 school districts in the province.

But attendance at the kindergarten level will not be compulsory, Dailly added.

On another policy matter announced earlier, Dailly said the two special commissions she is setting up to look into
